I. C. C. Schedule Is Held Void.

Three federal judges decided in favor of the Illinois Bell Telephone company yesterday and against the city of Chicago in the rate case which has been in litigation for seven years. An injunction was made permanent preventing the Illinois commerce commission from enforcing a rate reduction ordered in 1922 and which, if the court had ruled to the contrary, would have required the telephone company to refund more than $11,000,000 with accrued interest to the telephone users.

The judges who signed the injunction order are James H. Wilkerson, Evan A. Evans, and George T. Page. They criticized the city for the delay in bringing the case to trial and declared the commerce commission was at fault, too, in not having, since 1922, made a reexamination "on to determine a rate base by a method which is not, on its face, unreasonable and arbitrary."

Cite Years of Delay.

In the beginning of the 29 page opinion of the three judges the statement is made that $11,000,000 and interest is involved as well as a reduction in rates. The judges said that after years of delay they peremptorily set the case for trial on April 15, 1929, and that hearings were then held for two months during which the city submitted 3,000 pages of arguments and 281 exhibits. Practically all of the city's contentions were overruled.

In effect, the finding of the court was that the order of the commerce commission under the chairmanship of Frank L. Smith, who was later elected United States senator but was denied his seat, was confiscatory upon the property of the telephone company. A temporary injunction was issued in 1923 restraining the commission from putting its rate schedule into effect.

City Changes Attitude.

The city entered the fight during the Dever administration when Corporation Counsel Francis X. Busch appointed Attorney Stephen A. Foster to file an intervening petition. No court action was had during the Dever administration and former Judge Bernard P. Barasa was appointed as counsel for the city in the early days of the Thompson administration.

Last spring when notice was given by the court that no more delay would be tolerated Attorneys Benjamin F. Goldstein and George I. Haight were employed by the city to present its case. Their major contentions were a departure from the previous position of the city which had attached disputed valuation.

Raise Ownership Issue.

Goldstein and Haight raised the point that the American Telephone and Telegraph company was the owner of 99 per cent of the stock of the Illinois Bell Telephone company and they asked the court to determine if the commerce commission's rates were confiscatory upon the A. T. & T. company instead of on the Illinois Bell Telephone company.

The court held that the Illinois company retains its corporate identity when it attempts to show that certain rates are confiscatory. The judges held that the commerce commission did not make an investigation of the earnings of the parent company for the purpose of fixing rates for the local company and they say, therefore, that Goldstein and Haight were estopped from making that argument.

Attacks Long Distance Profits.

"If the position now taken by the city is correct the method pursued by the commerce commission is fundamentally erroneous and its order is void," the court decree said.

The city's lawyers argued that the local company was not receiving a fair share of the earnings on long distance calls—that if a proper division of those profits were made the disputed rates would not be confiscatory. The court disagreed with that contention.

Deny Reserve Deduction.

The court also refused to accept the claim of Goldstein and Haight that the company's reserve for depreciation of $26,000,000 should be deducted from the basic valuation of the company. The judges decided that whereas there was agreement between the litigants that the book value of the company as of June 30, 1923, was $101,626,014, a fair reproduction value was at least $145,000,000. The court did accept the city's figures on the going value of the concern at $4,196,067, instead of the $27,000,000 claimed by the company, but said it was not

Wife's Prayer: 'God Flay Him,' Husband Says

New York, Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Alden S. Condict, 37, tall and studious-looking great grandson of Jonathan Dickinson, first president of Princeton university and direct descendant of John Alden, testified in court today that his former wife, Katherine Turck Condict, kept him awake nights reciting verse and prayers which invariably ended with "Please, God, flay him," the "him" being Condict himself.

Condict unfolded his story to a jury in Supreme court Justice McGoldrick's court where his suit against his former parents-in-law, Dr. Fenton B. Turck and Mrs. Avis Turck went on trial today. Condict is asking $150,000 damages for alleged alienation of the affections of his wife, Katherine. Dr. Turck is one of the country's most noted biologists. He and Mrs. Turck formerly lived in Chicago at Rush and Huron streets when the doctor practiced medicine in that city.

Ex-Wife Takes Notes.

While Frank Tyson, counsel for Condict, traced the brief history of his client's marriage, Mrs. Condict, who is 27, and her mother made copious notes of the lawyer's opening address.

Condict, at the counsel table rummaged through books of poetry and notes carefully assorted into folders to prove, as his counsel announced, "The conspiracy to sow his happiness with the seeds of discord as soon as his wife's parents learned that their daughter was about to become a mother."

Mr. Tyson then disclosed that his client would prove that Dr. Turck, upon learning that he might become a grandfather, pressed a book of birth control into his daughter's hands and threatened to cut off her allowance if a child was born. Within eight weeks, the jury was informed, Condict went to his apartment and found the place dark and deserted. His wife did not return.

Her Mind "Poisoned."

"The parents of Mrs. Condict had so worked upon her mind," said Tyson, "that she could think of nothing but getting rid of her husband. She went to Reno where she procured a divorce. So fixed was she upon terminating the marriage that she wrote constantly upon bits of paper, 'Father will win,' 'Alden will win,' 'We lose,' 'He loses.'

"These slips she left in her cigaret case on her bureau where her husband discovered them and learned for the first time of the conspiracy to rob him of the wife he loved and the child for whom he was attempting to make over his life."

Condict charges Dr. Turck made uncomplimentary remarks about his ability to support a wife.

He testified today that Dr. Turck once told him that he was like the French statesman, Cailleaux, "Always getting some one else to pay your debts."

Before their honeymoon in 1925, Condict testified, his father-in-law gave him a check for $1,000. He thought it was just "spending money," he said, but later learned that Dr. Turck expected him to spend it on furniture.

H. B. Johnson, attorney for the Turcks, characterized Condict as a fortune hunter and indicated that Dr. and Mrs. Turck had done everything to make a success of their daughter's marriage.

"It was only when Mrs. Condict learned that she was a dollars and cents wife," the lawyer said, "that she decided to divorce her husband."

MORON SLUGS 2 WOMEN AS THEY WALK IN STREET

Police squads from the Hudson avenue station were searching the near north side early this morning for a young moron who had clubbed two women on the street.

The first victim was Miss Lucy Hartman, 36 years old, a maid in the home of Ernest R. Graham of the architectural firm of Graham, Anderson, Probst & White, at 25 Banks street. Miss Hartman was returning to the Graham home after an evening with friends when she was set upon by the prowler at State and Banks street. He walked up behind her and struck her on the head with his club, felling her to the sidewalk. Passers-by came to her aid as the moron fled. Miss Hartman was taken to the Henrotin hospital, where her injury was found not to be serious.

Miss Josephine Belski, 27 years old, a telephone operator, was struck down by the marauder as she approached her home at 1427 North Dearborn street. She was taken to St. Joseph's hospital.

In neither case did the assailant attempt to rob his victims. Miss Belski, who caught a glimpse of the moron before his blow descended, described him as a young man of short stature, wearing a dark blue overcoat, a black slouch hat, and rubbers.

Urge Law with Song in Capitol Halls

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.—(AP)—"The Star-Spangled Banner" was sung in the crowded house judiciary committee room today as testimony that congress should recognize that stirring song to be the national anthem.

The committeemen, inured to long hours of arguments and speechmaking, leaned forward in their chairs with evident interest at this refreshing innovation.

Easily Reach High Notes.

A hundred or more men and women intent on having congress approve the 116 year old song sat silently and let the singers and the flag speak for themselves. Everybody waited a bit nervously as the singers approached the high notes which have created a controversy as to whether the song is adaptable to the average voice.

However, the voices of the two sopranos—Mrs. Elsie Jorss-Reilley of Washington and Mrs. Grace Evelyn Boudlin of Baltimore—rang out strong and clear and rose easily to the highest notes.

Always Veterans' Song.

Walter Joyce of the Veterans of Foreign Wars faced the committee, then turned and pointed to the flag while he told of standing on San Juan hill during the Spanish-American war while a band played, "The Star-Spangled Banner."

"All around me in pup tents men were lying sick with fever, but when they heard that glorious old tune every man somehow got to his feet," Joyce said. "With all due respect to congress, no matter what it decides to do in this matter, 'The Star-Spangled Banner' is our song and will remain so forever."

For two hours speeches were made by the heads of 40 patriotic organizations. A petition signed by 5,000,000 persons and letters and telegrams were piled upon the table in support of the proposed legislation.

SINCLAIR LEWIS WINS $800 CUT IN ALIMONY DEBT

Reno, Nev., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Sinclair Lewis, novelist, hereafter will pay alimony of only $200 a month to his former wife, Grace Hegler Lewis, winning a reduction of $800 a month in court here today.

He originally was ordered to pay the former Mrs. Lewis $1,000 a month as long as his income exceeded $48,000 annually. He contended today his income will be $10,000 under that amount.

However, at the end of the year Lewis must pay any additional sum necessary to bring the alimony total to one-fourth his income.

BREW AT HOME AND BE A SPORT! IS FORT'S PLEA

Not Hoover Spokesman

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Stories printed in afternoon newspapers intimating that the speech of Representative Franklin W. Fort represented the opinions of President Hoover brought a denial from the White House. It was said in behalf of the President that "Mr. Fort stated correctly when he said he was voicing only his own views. There was no occasion for him to consult the White House on his speech and he did not do so."

Explaining the occasion of his speech, Representative Fort said:

"My attention has been called to an utterly misleading headline in a local newspaper referring to my remarks in the house as the President's views. My speech reflected simply my own views."

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Representative Franklin W. Fort [Rep., N. J.], close friend of President Hoover, advised the wets today in a speech in the house to be satisfied with home brew.

Except for emphasis upon the lawfulness of making and drinking light beverages in the home, Mr. Fort's address was an orthodox prohibition argument. If attracted a large attendance in the house, as the New Jersey representative, although regarded as a moderate dry, has refrained from discussing the prohibition issue heretofore.

Fear His Prospects Damaged.

As a possible contender for the Republican gubernatorial nomination in 1931 in a wet state, it had been thought that he might come out for some form of modification and that his resignation this week as secretary of the Republican national committee was to prevent any embarrassment to the administration. Instead, Mr. Fort, in the opinion of New Jersey Republicans, proved to be so dry as probably to injure his political prospects, despite the sop thrown out to wets in the home brew suggestion.

Mr. Fort took the view that the drinking of intoxicants is not morally wrong and that the purpose of prohibition laws is to hit at the commercialized liquor traffic.

"To those who want beer and light wines, I suggest that they forego the wish to buy and be content with what they make, but, above all and beyond all, that they be good sports," said Mr. Fort. "They have made their fight and lost—lost to a combination of the two mighty tendencies of the age—the economic and ethical reorganization of the American people."

Converted to Prohibition.

Representative Fort told the house that he began to use liquor as a beverage as a boy of 18, feeling its use to be a social necessity, and quit at 42, feeling its discontinuance to be a social duty. He said he would have voted against the 18th amendment if he had been a member of the house in 1917; but since that time has been converted to prohibition.

"Perhaps the Volstead act needs clarification on the question of home brew—although nobody has ever been convicted for making it for home use," said Mr. Fort. "But, otherwise, it seems to me pretty clearly to fulfill the purposes of its adoption and to satisfy the real wishes of the American people—for the preservation of their industrial system, their prosperity, and their homes."

Mr. Fort quoted the section of the law which provides that penalties against the manufacture of liquor without a permit "shall not apply to a person for manufacturing nonintoxicating cider and fruit juices, exclusively for use in his home."

No Modification Need Seen.

"This provision seems to me rather clearly to lift cider and light wines, home-made for home use, out of the one-half of one per cent definition, and, as to them, to apply the test of intoxication in fact," said Mr. Fort. "And, of course, if they can be lawfully made they can be lawfully possessed in the home of the maker and used by him, his family and his guests."

Discussing possible forms of modification of the law, Mr. Fort said government selling had repugnant features and that public sentiment would

Polite Bandits Serve Lunch to 7 Victims

Five smartly dressed young men held up the Edgewater laundry at 5521 Broadway last evening and escaped with the contents of the safe after serving food and refreshments to seven employés and donating a $10 bill for cigars and candy.

They were, in the words of the telephone operator, Miss Mildred Sturm, "the most mannerly young chaps I ever met—and to think they were bandits!"

Miss Sturm was clearing her switchboard preparing to go home at 5:50 p. m. when a brown touring car stopped in front and discharged four men. She flinched when they sauntered in and produced pistols.

Girl Allowed to Call.

"Don't be scared, young lady," the spokesman reassured her. "Just disconnect those plugs and come inside the office."

"But I've got to go home," she wailed. "We're having company for supper and my family will worry if I'm late."

"Alright, call up and tell them you'll be detained an hour by your work," said the robber, relenting. While Miss Sturm telephoned her mother at 4417 Beacon street under the eyes of the bandit, his confederates were in parley in the office with Frank Oswald Jr., foreman of the drivers and a son of Battalion Chief Oswald of the fire department.

Go After the Manager.

"We don't believe in doing bodily harm," one of the robbers told Oswald with a suggestive glance at the safe. The foreman protested that neither he nor his four drivers knew the combination.

"No? Then who does?" the robber asked. Oswald said the office manager, Frank Klein, had the combination, but pointed out he had gone home half an hour before.

"Okeh, we'll get him," the robber said, and with one companion he stepped to the car and was driven away to the Klein home at 6268 Lakewood avenue.

Revives Woman Who Faints.

Klein's sister, Mrs. Josephine Llewellyn, answered their ring and fainted at sight of the pistols. While one robber covered Klein the other stepped to the kitchen, got a glass of water for Mrs. Llewellyn, and revived her.

"Don't worry," they told her as they drove off with Klein.

"Those drivers—married men, probably—they'll be hungry waiting for us," one of the robbers said as the car sped back to the laundry. So, at Broadway and Bryn Mawr avenue, the car stopped, one of the robbers went into a restaurant and came out with two gallons of coffee and two dozen sandwiches.

All Enjoy Luncheon.

They reached the office at 7 p. m., invited everybody to sit down and have lunch, and ordered Klein to the safe after he had munched two sandwiches. He obeyed and one of the robbers extracted $500.

"You people are all right," said the spokesman, shaking hands all around. From his hip pocket he pulled a flask of bourbon, passed it among the drivers and bid them drink heartily.

"For candy and cigars," he said, pressing a $10 note into Oswald's hand as they departed.

Boy Shot by Policeman as Child Gang Robs Store

Joseph Wojtyli, 16 years old, 2213 Custer street, was shot in the abdomen and probably fatally wounded by Policeman John Walsh of the Shakespeare avenue station early this morning after Wojtyli and three other boys had broken into the haberdashery of Earl W. Lally at 2603 Milwaukee avenue. The other youths all were captured. They are Frank Buraczewski, 16 years old, 2239 North Leavitt street; John Madejczk, 16, of 2140 North Oakley avenue, and Paul Welnick, 11 years old, of 2147 Webster avenue.

FORECAST MADE AS OFFICIALS MEET GOVERNOR

$10,000,000 Offered to Help City.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

No taxes until June 1 was the depressing information that issued yesterday from Gov. Emmerson's four hour conference with the state and Cook county taxing officials. Whether the local governments can obtain money on which to operate until collections start is extremely uncertain.

The financial difficulties in Cook county have struck a hard blow at the state. On last Jan. 1 $200,000 in waterway bonds were due, but these have not been paid. It is not an actual default, because technically the bonds have not been presented. State Treasurer Custer, State Auditor Nelson, and State Director of Finance Kinney persuaded the owners of the bonds to hold them for a period.

See $4,856,602 Default.

On May 1, these state officials reckon that Illinois will be in default $4,856,602 in payments to Cook county of the distributive school fund. In addition they are anxious about $3,375,000 in principal and interest due on soldiers' bonus bonds next Aug. 1, and the expectancy that the University of Illinois will be out of operating revenues on Sept. 1 unless Cook county taxes are paid in the meantime. Still later $1,018,000 in waterway bonds will be due and these too are giving concern to the state officials.

On top of all this the governor and other state officials are fearful that taxes will be reduced because Cook county has asserted in its reassessment that the assessed valuation shall be 37 per cent of the sound value of real estate.

Offer $10,000,000 Aid.

In Chicago considerable hope was attached to the announcement by the executives of the building managers' association that they would "recommend to their members the immediate payment of some $10,000,000 on their 1930 taxes, provided proper safeguards are assured." This offer was made in a letter from Lester L. Falk, attorney for the group, to Silas H. Strawn of the citizens' committee.

The nature of the "proper safeguards" was not announced, but it is known that at a recent meeting of the building managers it was asserted that the group would not put up money to continue unnecessary pay rolls and wasteful expenditures. It is therefore assumed that the property owners will deny public officials the right to spend this cash as they see fit.

Bankers Explain Loan.

Some employés in public offices attached significance to the fact that the sanitary district was able to borrow $525,000 to pay interest and principal on bonds. Bankers explained this as follows:

"Money will be available to prevent any default in bonds and interest. This was indicated by the fact that the forest preserve district was able on Thursday to dispose of $500,000 in bonds with which to pay interest and principal on other bonds." It was added that these two purchases do not indicate that money will be forthcoming for pay rolls generally.

The announcement that no taxes are expected until June 1 spread gloom among the 40,122 public employés who are now unable to obtain the $11,275,500 in salaries due them. If no money is available until taxes are collected at the forecast date of June 1—except for emergency services—the local governments will owe more than $52,000,000 in salaries alone. That is an average of $1,300 per employé, and it is considered improbable that many of them have that much laid away for an added four months of payless pay days.

Taxes Wait Till June 1.

"We have arrived at this conclusion: The board of assessors will complete its work and turn over all the country town books by Feb. 20. The board of review will undertake to complete its work by May 1. It will take the county clerk 10 to 20 days to spread the taxes and the collector 10 days in which to send out the bills. Therefore, it will be June 1 when the collection of taxes will begin."

At the governor's conference were State Auditor Nelson, State Treasurer Custer and State Director of Finance Kinney; Chairman Malone of the state tax commission; Assessors Ringer, Krutckoff, Oliver and Conroy and Reviewers Litsinger and Barrett of Cook county; and Harry Cutmore, appraiser of the real estate for the possessing bodies. These officials sat in the governor's room in the Hotel Stevens and by their silence acquiesced in the forecast presented.

Gov. Emmerson said the tax officials appreciated the serious situation and whole-heartedly agreed to expedite the work as much as possible.

"The spending of $45,000 a day in interest alone," went on the governor, "appeals to us down state as an enormous outlay; but I have not injected myself into the situation more than was necessary to look after the state's interests."

Special Session Expected.

It is understood that the governor and his confereps agreed that a special session of the legislature cannot be held until after the primaries in April. But all concerned are said to have taken it for granted that one will be held after that time when a definite program of legislation has been formulated and agreed upon.

Just before the conference adjourned the governor said to the officials:

"Quit your quarreling. Get down to work. Collect the taxes. Quit worrying about who will be nominated and who will be elected. Eliminate politics from this tax matter. Go ahead and do your work. Perhaps the assessment is not perfect. It would be wonderful if it was. I don't believe you can reform a major part of our government in a day. It is certain you cannot formulate a tax reform in a day. It is impossible to do it inside of two or three years. Now you have lost a year already, and some time that must be made up.

Forget Politics, He Says.

"I'm not mixing in your local politics, but let me tell you this, that you later will be asking for a special session of the legislature. When that comes, it will deal with taxes and nothing else. Let me say that I am a friend of Chicago. The spirit of downstate citizens are proud of the record heretofore made by Chicago, and I am especially anxious to do everything I can for Chicago. I have been fighting my hardest for the waterways and I have been attempting to do other things of benefit to Chicago.

"Forget all about politics in this matter. Go out and do all you can for the betterment and welfare of Chicago."

The conference was an earnest discussion. Frequently the voice of a speaker could be heard half way down the hallway, when some one almost yelled. Only once did the governor speak loudly.

Demands Tax Collection.

"If you don't collect these taxes," he shouted, "you will put the state in the position of repudiating its bonds. I will do everything I can to prevent it, but if it happens, all of the blame will come back on your heads. Can't you understand that irreparable loss to the state is threatened by the delay?

"Why was the factor of 37 per cent prescribed? Were you playing to the galleries, or was some one running for office? A bank downstate with $100 in assets pays taxes on $100, not on $37."

"George O. Fairweather has been running the whole show," put in Charles V. Barrett of the board of review.

Chairman Malone of the state tax commission explained to the governor that the board of assessors had determined upon 37 per cent after making a thorough investigation of the average tax valuation downstate.

Barrett Speaks Again.

"You are not going to make the banks pay on 60 per cent without trouble, from them," said Barrett. "If you want to avoid trouble you will have to place the banks on a 37 per cent basis, too."

"Do you think that 37 per cent will be enough to support the governments?" asked Gov. Emmerson.

"I opposed the 37 per cent," said Edward R. Litsinger of the board of review. "I knew that it would not be enough."

"Where are we going to land with a 37 per cent ratio?" persisted the governor.

"In the gutter," retorted Litsinger. "You will find that the banks will classify you unless they are placed on a 37 per cent basis, too," added Mr. Barrett.

"Fairweather is the guardian angel in this matter and other things in Chicago," spoke up Litsinger.

Officials Discuss Audit.

The fact that court reporters attend all of the sessions of the board of review and that the state tax commission is making an audit of the taxes reviewed was the subject of a prolonged discussion.

"Who is paying the cost of that?" demanded Barrett.

"The citizens' committee has guaranteed that it shall be paid," replied Malone.

Later Silas H. Strawn, head of the citizens' committee, asserted that he had not made any payments and had not contracted for the expense.

"We do not have to submit to all of that—these fellows chasing us from room to room to put down every word," said Barrett. "Fairweather gets a copy of that report every night, doesn't he?"

"We don't object to all this audit stuff," said Barrett, "but your auditors appear to have the impression that they are sent out to find us doing something wrong. They will never find it. Why can't we have a copy of that report daily?"

"You can," replied Malone.

"If this audit is necessary, why shouldn't the state pay for it?" asked Gov. Emmerson.

Custer then pointed out that there is no appropriation for that purpose.

Inspection of records in the renters' court yesterday diclosed that two public employés and four public pensioners whose salaries and pensions the city and county have been unable to pay, have been brought into court by landlords because they have been unable to pay their rent. The four pensioners are mothers whose chief source of income had been the mothers' pension fund until it was stopped in December.

There is the case of Mrs. Anna Blaha, a widow and mother of three children who lives in a second floor flat at 1817 West 19th street. Because her pension stopped she was unable to pay her rent bill of $27. She was taken into the renters' court in December and ordered to vacate.

Mrs. Blaha was found yesterday pacing the floor trying to keep a 7 months old baby warm. There was no coal for heating the flat and Mrs. Blaha said she had no food. She was wearing heavy mittens and outdoor clothing to keep herself warm.

Widow Ordered to Vacate.

Mrs. Louis Mogelepsky, a widow and the mother of four children, who lives at 1522 South Spaulding avenue, was ordered to court on Dec. 27 for failure to pay $35 for one month's rent. She was given 10 days to vacate. Another widow, Mrs. Barbara Ruberto, who supports five children, appeared in court on Jan. 13 for failure to pay $100 rent. Mrs. J. Maltimore, who lives with her three children at 3542 West Jackson boulevard, was unable to pay $80 rent when her pension stopped and was given 10 days to vacate.

Robert L. Weisbaum, employed in the city water department, was summoned to court on Thursday and given ten days to vacate. He is the father of three children. John W. Smith, colored, an employé of the county recorder's office, was taken to court yesterday for failure to pay rent on his flat at 354 East 60th street. He was given two weeks to vacate.

"Evictions Unavoidable."

Judge John F. Haas said the court action in all cases was unavoidable. He asserted that the law provided for a five day period in which to vacate, but that he had stretched the time from five days to ten in most cases.

Mrs. Sarah Lindon, social worker attached to the court, said the judge had given money of his own to some of the unfortunate public employés and had appealed to his friends to help them. Funds from the bailiffs' welfare association and the clerks' welfare association also have been appropriated to aid them, Mrs. Lindon asserted.

and that, besides, the state is short of cash.

"The letters I get show that the reassessment is a blessing in disguise," said Malone. "It has worked admirably in Cleveland and will here if given a chance."

"One trouble is that every one expects the appraisal to be absolutely perfect," put in Cutmore. "What difference does it make in the value of a downtown building whether it is one or two years older or younger?"

"That does not make much difference," put in Litsinger.

"Every time a complainant comes before you I hear you ask how old is the building," Cutmore shot back.

Litsinger was angered. He roared in return: "You've got a damn good job, and you should attend to it. One of the troubles in this reassessment is that one fellow wants to look after the other fellow's job."

"Getting Bad Reputation."

"But the point is," interposed Gov. Emmerson, "that in the meantime Chicago and the state are getting a bad reputation. A banker told me yesterday that a large insurance company in the east had wired instructions not to buy any more real estate mortgages because of the bad reports coming out of Chicago. Another story was that some one was ready to file a petition in bankruptcy against Cook county. I was asked if there was anything to that report."

Later the governor asked Chairman Malone whether the members of the state tax commission had ordered the reassessment. Commissioner Francis is reported now to be in California, Commissioner Spivey in Florida, and Commissioner Telford in Arkansas.

"The members of the commission considered and passed upon each order," replied Mr. Malone. "I will tell you how this started. Mr. Fairweather came to me——"

Barrett Gives Version.

"I know that whole story," broke in Barrett. "Fairweather came to me before he went to you. He led me up on the mountain and told me how famous I might become if I stood for this reassessment stuff, but I told him I was more than 21 years old Then he went over to you."

In his letter Attorney Lester L. Falk for the Building Managers made a vigorous attack against the city administration and especially against the school board. He said in part:

"Certain political factions are trying to put much of the blame for the present financial crisis on the downtown property owners. This effort is simply an attempt to muddy the true situation, and examination of the real facts will reveal that we have done everything humanly possible to speed the reassessment and the collection of taxes.

Takes Rap at Caldwell.

"President Caldwell of the board of education and his special tax attorney, Mr. Sullivan, have beclouded the real issues by disseminating false information with reference to loop and other downtown tax assessments.

"This attack takes two forms. First, they point with horror to the reduction of $300,000,000 in downtown assessments. As a matter of fact, the reduction is $119,000,000—only a portion of the total reduction throughout the city of $518,093,173 from which every taxpayer will benefit. Second, they produce inaccurate figures to mislead the public into the idea that assessments on the downtown properties are markedly lower than those actually fixed by the board of assessors.

"The action on their part is intended to curry favor with the small taxpayers in the outlying and other districts by charging that that downtown properties have been underassessed. Their figures claim a total assessment against 50 of these properties of $145,000,000 when in fact the assessments total $177,000,000, a difference of $34,000,000.

Cites Hotel Figures.

"The most notorious single example of misinformation is contained in the figures they issued on the Hotel La Salle. Caldwell and Sullivan claimed the assessors assessed the Hotel La Salle at $1,485,825, when in fact the assessors' books reveal the valuation of $7,485,357. In this one piece of property alone Caldwell and Sullivan misrepresented the facts by approximately $6,000,000. We deplore this distortion of facts. Our group is ready and willing to be assessed a just figure, this figure to be arrived at on a fair, uniform and equal basis as prescribed by law and the rules of the tax commission."

JUSTICE KEMP IS QUESTIONED IN ANNULMENT CASE

Howard H. Kemp, the marrying justice of Crown Point, Ind., yesterday paid his long deferred visit to Superior Judge Sabath. The justice came to testify in the annulment sought by Mrs. Ruth Briganza Ewata, who married Ben Ewata, Chinese restaurant owner, last July, before securing a divorce from her first husband.

She charged that the ceremony was performed while she was in a drunken stupor after a tour of cabarets and roadhouses which she was forced to make when Ewata threatened to discharge her from his employ unless she went with him. Justice Kemp said that he remembered the marriage well. He described Ewata as a tall, thin man. Mrs. Ewata said that Ewata is very short in stature. Justice Kemp said that he could smell no liquor on her breath at the time. Judge Sabath continued the case until next Tuesday.

With this order Judge Sabath invited the justice to sit on the bench with him. The justice has married 40,000 couples and the judge has signed almost the same number of divorce decrees. After sitting on the bench for three hours Justice Kemp said that since he had seen the other end of marriages he would question couples who came before him more closely and refuse to wed those applicants who had not given due consideration to the seriousness of the step.

Controller Lists Debts for Aldermen.

City Controller Schmidt sent to the city council yesterday a report concerning approximately 6,000 unpaid vouchers lying in his office, showing that these obligations of the corporate fund total $3,600,049. The vouchers are made out to hundreds of merchants and concerns which supply the city with various goods and to "experts," who are not carried on the regular city pay rolls.

In addition, the controller reported two other items which brought the total to $14,840,989. One of these was for $1,177,417 for accrued interest on 1928 tax warrants which, probably, will not be paid until the taxes are collected and the warrants redeemed. The other item was for $10,063,522, which is the balance due to special funds in the city treasury out of which money was borrowed to pay salaries toward the end of last year.

Report Asked by Council.

The council, at its last session, had asked the controller for the report so it might know to whom the city owed the money and what the city had received in return.

City officials and city employés, the report shows, ride in automobiles although the city is unable to pay for them. Several dealers are still awaiting payment for cars sold to the city and the supply men are represented by unpaid vouchers for gasoline and rubber tires. The amount for automobiles, gasoline and tires is shown as $293,485.

Schmidt Lists Debts.

Only vouchers for more than $500 were listed individually in the controller's five page report. Some of the items are as follows:

	Amount.
Sewer, coal companies	$ 37,622
Personal services for "experts"	153,929
Nowak Meat Market	5,868
B & M Siren Manufacturing Co.	6,000
M. Huber company [garbage disp.]	22,131
Industrial Refuse Disposal company	46,656
Home for Destitute Crippled Children	1,500
Sanitary district [electric current for 1928 and 1929	695,437

The Chicago Warehouse and Terminal company has an unpaid voucher for $1,620 which was issued to it last March. The council contends that the company owes the city more than $600,000, which has accumulated over a number of years.

BILL IN SENATE OFFERS FREEDOM TO PHILIPPINES

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Progressive autonomy for the Philippines, with complete withdrawal of the United States in ten years, is proposed in a bill introduced by Senator Arthur Vandenberg [Rep., Mich.].

Under the Vandenberg scheme the Philippine legislature would immediately draft a constitution for the islands, which, after approval by a referendum of the people, would be approved by the President of the United States. During the 10 year autonomy period the only American interference would be through a civilian American commissioner acting as adviser.

Provision is made for a native plebiscite at the end of the decade, and, if the result is favorable, independence, subject to the consent of the American congress by a two-thirds vote in both houses, would become an automatic reality.

31 GO ON TRIAL IN INDIA FOR PLOT AIMED AT KING

MEERUT, United Provinces of India, Jan. 31.—(AP)—The trial of 31 persons accused of conspiring to deprive the king of his sovereignty in British India, opened today before Judge R. L. Yorke. The accused pleaded not guilty. The accused, the prosecution said, were members of the communist internationale, which had established connections with all the big railways, arsenals, and dock workers, and also established connections with the All-India Workers' Peasants' party with branches in Bengal, Bombay, and the United Provinces of Punjab.

SHOW HOW HAWKING OF HONORS BROUGHT MILLIONS TO LIBERALS

LONDON, Jan. 31.—(AP)—A study of former Premier Lloyd George, leader of the Liberal party, has aroused interest here. Sir Charles Mallet, author of the book, which was published today, formerly was a Liberal member of the house of commons and financial secretary to the war office.

Sir Charles in one place writes that £1,500,000 [about $7,275,000] came to the Liberal purse from the granting of honors, and adds that the sum by investment in a few years grew to £3,000,000.

"A systematic search, it seemed, began for gentlemen who would pay handsomely for honors," he says. "The names were collected of men known to have made fortunes during the war. In most industrial centers such men were to be found. Relations gradually were established with them through friends or acquaintances or local lawyers, or by visits from travelers for the ministerial firm."

ADVERSE BRIDGE ORDER APPROVED BY MAJOR WILD

Resident Engineer Hit Ordinance.

Maj. H. J. Wild, resident federal engineer in Chicago, recommended to his Washington chief, who transmitted a similar report to the secretary of war, that Chicago be given no relief from the open bridge nuisance. This was learned in Washington yesterday when war department officials admitted that the decision received here on Tuesday was in substantial accord with the views submitted by Maj. Wild.

The final letter sent to Secretary of War Hurley was signed by Brig. Gen. Herbert Deakyne, acting chief of engineers, who received the Wild report from Capt. Howard Yost, bridge officer.

Benefits Harbor Tugs.

The decision itself, as received by Commissioner of Public Works Wolfe, forbade the city council from putting into effect an amended ordinance lengthening the bridge closed hours. Included also was a sentence fixing the water level as the bridge clearance measurement point which likewise balks attempts to prevent harbor tugs from opening the spans during closed hours.

The council had considered fixing the unvarying city datum as the measurement point, which would have effectively stopped tugs, barges, and other small craft from opening the bridges except during the period allotted for lifting the spans. This was originally suggested by Lieut. Col. W. C. Weeks, who preceded Wild as federal engineer in Chicago, but was mentioned unfavorably in the report Wild sent to Washington, according to officials.

Report Suggests Tunnels.

In his letter to Secretary Hurley, Gen. Deakyne suggested that Chicago should seek relief from the bridge annoyance through "comprehensive traffic control, by the construction of vehicular tunnels and by a more sympathetic operation of river traffic."

Chicago congressmen, led by Representative Fred A. Britten, have offered to ask a reconsideration from war department officials if the city council will indicate what action it wishes taken. Council plans for the protest will be considered at a special meeting of the bridge subcommittee on Wednesday afternoon, Ald. William A. Rowan [10th] announced.

NEW YORK MAY AID CHICAGO IN WATER FIGHT

Letter Hints Antagonism Is Nearing End.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Intimations that New York City might change its attitude from one of antagonism to one of friendly aid towards Chicago in the Lake Michigan water diversion controversy were the latest development yesterday. They left the sanitary district authorities somewhat puzzled, not to say skeptical.

The proffer of help was conveyed in a letter to Corporation Counsel Ettelson from Charles S. Horowitz, acting corporation counsel of New York in the absence of his chief, Arthur J. W. Hilly. Mr. Horowitz wrote that New York is especially interested that the final decree in the case shall not question the right of Chicago to take such volumes of water from Lake Michigan as it needs for domestic and municipal purposes. He said New York might even submit a brief as a friend of the court if it appeared that Chicago's right is challenged.

Hughes Finding Favorable.

The Hughes finding Dec. 17 was regarded as a triumph for the sanitary district's fundamental contention that Chicago should not be forced to discharge storm water and effluent from the sewage disposal plants into Lake Michigan to pollute the drinking supply. Mr. Hughes upheld the district's contention that Chicago's drinking water should not be contaminated after the 250 million dollar sewage disposal plant is completed, by pouring into the lake the effluent.

He overrode the contention of the six complaining lake states against the diversion of water from one watershed into another. The six states—New York, Wisconsin, Michigan, Minnesota, Ohio, and Pennsylvania—contended that all effluent should be poured into Lake Michigan instead of down the Des Plaines-Illinois-Mississippi valley.

Skeptics on the drainage board last night expressed doubt. They said although they welcomed an expression of good feeling from the legal department of New York City, still there were no indications as yet that New York has withdrawn from the suit against Chicago's sanitary district.

Other Suits Are Cited.

Some of them argued it may be a case with New York of "whose ox is gored." They pointed out that New Jersey has a suit against New York, and Connecticut against Massachusetts, involving the question of diverting water from one watershed to another. This, as they view it, may be giving New York a different slant at the Lake Michigan controversy.

Exceptions in the diversion case are to be filed at Washington Feb. 3, and the case is to be argued before the Supreme court March 12.

Chicago is urged to get busy in the construction of terminal facilities for the Illinois waterway in an open utterance from Col. Robert Isham Randolph, president of the Chicago Association of Commerce, who said:

"Barge terminals at strategic points on all of the connecting waterways must be provided and the legislative and administrative machinery for acquiring, constructing and operating these facilities must be re-enacted. We have in the Chicago metropolitan area potentialities for the greatest industrial and commercial harbor in the world, but it will require real work to make these realities."

N. Y. "IN SAME BOAT"

New York, Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Arthur J. W. Hilly, corporation counsel of New York City, tonight explained the offer to intervene and help Chicago in its lawsuit over the diversion of Lake Michigan water.

He said that New York City's plans for water supply development have placed this city in a predicament similar to that of Chicago. The state of New Jersey has already brought suit in the United States Supreme court, seeking to enjoin the city of New York from diverting water from the tributaries of the Delaware river in upper New York state.

Mr. Hilly said he was not in position to discuss any "change of front" which Chicago may think the present attitude of the city of New York presents, but he did say that "we are in the same boat now."

"But," Mr. Hilly was told, "the state of New York has been opposing Chicago's lake diversion plans—how do you reconcile that with the present attitude of the law department of the city of New York?"

"That's for the lawyers to decide," Hilly responded. "However, the city is not solely involved, as all towns near the source of supply or along the water tunnels we propose to construct, will have the right to tap our lines and buy water from the city of New York. That makes our project of concern to the entire state and may have some influence on the future attitude of the attorney general of the state."

LOS ANGELES POLICE DEMAND ALL FILIPINO DANCE HALLS CLOSE

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 31.—(AP)—The police revealed today that Filipino dance halls in Los Angeles had been ordered closed temporarily at the request of the Filipino patrons. Beatings suffered by three Filipino youths at the hands of Americans Wednesday and last night were said by Sergt. R. J. Chambers to have inspired the request.

Chambers said investigation indicated that the attacks had been the result of personal quarrels, rather than as an echo of the Filipino disturbances in the northern part of the state.

Find Missing White Girl.

San Jose, Cal., Jan. 31.—(AP)—Carrie Victorini, 16, white girl of Watsonville, who had been missing since last Monday night and who was thought by police to have been in hiding with Filipino lettuce workers near Watsonville was found by detectives in a hotel here today. She told police she left home because her parents had mistreated her. Filipinos apparently had nothing to do with her disappearance.

'MASTER PENMAN' PENS HIS WAY BACK INTO CELL

Aaron Moshiek, called the master penman by the police, and Morris Bogolowski, once charged with murder, were surrendered yesterday by their bondsmen, who had posted $10,000 appeal bond for them pending a review of a conviction for passing worthless checks. Moshiek, the police say, can imitate any signature and of recent years Bogolowski has been one of his chief assistants, it is charged.

"Why are you surrendering the defendants at this time, when a decision has not been rendered on the appeal?" the judge asked William Friedman, the bondsman.

"That fellow Moshiek just can't resist the temptation to sign checks," replied Friedman. "He gave me a 'bum' check as payment for signing his bond. I suppose I should have known better than to take a check from him, but then again I didn't think he would dare to do it. But he did and you can have them back in your jail."

EXPECTS EARLY LEASE OF SCHOOL LAND AS AIRPORT

Caldwell Sees Accord as Hearing Is Set.

BY ROBERT WOOD.

President Caldwell of the board of education yesterday announced that he expected a solution of the airport controversy at the next meeting of the board.

The announcement followed a conference between Caldwell and Theophilus Schmid, chairman of the school board committee on buildings and grounds. At this meeting it was agreed to hold a special public hearing on Friday on the proposal that the school board lease to the city some 600 acres of land at 63d street and Cicero avenue adjoining the present municipal airport. City officials and representatives of aviation interests will be heard at the meeting.

The terms of the lease will not be drawn until after the hearing. Chairman Schmid said he planned to draw up a recommendation on the matter at the next meeting of his committee on Feb. 10 for submission to the board for final action at its session on Feb. 13.

Expect Sufficient Votes.

School trustees supporting the proposed transfer are confident that sufficient votes can be mustered to pass the measure, despite the objections of two trustees who have indicated that they will not sanction a long term lease. Only six votes are needed to approve the action and informal discussion has indicated that the lease will have the support of at least that many trustees.

The chief argument expected to be advanced by the opponents of the proposed lease is that the school board should be reluctant to release one of the few remaining parcels of school land. President Caldwell and Mr. Schmid pointed out that the site is not desirable for school purposes and that it now earns a revenue of only $6 an acre per year.

The objection that the schools would not benefit by the increase in value of the property is expected to be met by including in the agreement a clause stipulating that the city and the schools shall 'split the profits of the field.

St. Louis Boosts Airport.

While plans for the expansion of Chicago's municipal airport are pending, St. Louis, Chicago's chief rival for air transport traffic in the central states, is contemplating a total expenditure of $1,138,500 to develop its municipal air field into one of the most modern airdromes in the country. According to word received here yesterday, the plans call for the construction of an air terminal building costing $150,000, which will serve as headquarters for air lines and offices for the weather bureau, radio station, and other agencies.

The field is to be completely lighted for night flying and double runways are to be constructed so that planes may take off simultaneously in all directions. Chicago's "one-track" airport permits the landing or taking off of only one plane at a time.

LOVE SWEET TO HUTCHINSON AT $135 PER MONTH

Inamorata's Thrift Won His Heart.

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 3.—[Special.]—Samuel S. Hutchinson, wealthy Chicago film distributor, unfolded from the witness stand today the story of as thrifty an illicit love as the local court records can show.

Testifying in the suit of his wife to collect $300,000 from Mrs. Edith Taylor for alienating his affections, he revealed that Mrs. Taylor's thrifty ways had won and kept his heart for the last 18 years.

Hutchinson, who is 60, and whose income is reputed to be between $25,000 and $40,000 a year, grew eloquent as he testified to the details of his "love bargain" with Mrs. Taylor—a real bargain for him, he revealed. He told the jury that in contrast to the extravagant demands of his wife, Mrs. Taylor was modestly content with an allowance of $135 a month, on which she not only maintained the Hollywood bungalow which Hutchinson shared with her, but supported their 18 year old illegitimate daughter Jane and had saved enough to buy a substantial equity in an apartment building in Los Angeles.

Started at $100 a Month.

Hutchinson said he paid Mrs. Taylor $100 a month for a long time in Chicago, and increased her allowance to $135 a month when she moved to Hollywood with him several years ago.

"My wife was selfish," he said. "She continually harassed me with financial demands. My home in Chicago cost me so much that I couldn't bear it—I wanted to get away. Mrs. Taylor, on the other hand, was thrifty, kindly and considerate. She never pursued me, called me on the telephone or asked me to go places with her. She was always modest—always tried to save money, and that kind of conduct appealed to me."

Hutchinson admitted that he wrote to his son, Hobart, in Chicago last May, offering him $10,000 if he would induce his mother to drop the alienation action.

His purpose in making the offer, he said, was "to protect Jane," who, he said, does not know that her parents are not married.

Love Letters Read.

A series of letters from Hutchinson to Mrs. Taylor, overflowing with expressions of affection, were read into the records by the defense today.

"They show that Hutchinson was the pursuer, and was not enticed by Mrs. Taylor," the defense attorneys stated, during one squabble with Mrs. Hutchinson's counsel, who sought to keep the letters out of the case.

The letters were written to Mrs. Taylor before the date, in 1927, when Mrs. Hutchinson found out that her husband had been leading a double life with the former college girl whom he met in Valparaiso, Ind.

They abounded in such expressions as "tell Jane to drink her milk so she will get big and strong and give her daddy a big hug," "I am very anxious to see you and Jane again. Love."

Wife Takes the Stand.

Mrs. Hutchinson took the stand as rebuttal witness in her own behalf at the close of the day. Discarding the polished, measured tones with which she testified in her first appearance three days ago, the plaintiff became vehement and outspoken. Mrs. Hutchinson denied that she "had extravagant habits, was selfish or a social climber."

"Mr. Hutchinson should have appreciated the social advantages I gained for him," she said. "My position in society gave him a prestige that other men of his class would have been glad to have."

Mrs. Hutchinson said she never had dry goods bills that exceeded $150 and that she had to "keep insisting that my husband keep up ordinary repairs on the home."

The case probably will go to the jury Monday.

Youngsters Take Over Family Cares.

Two mothers stood sullenly yesterday before Judge John J. Lupe in the Stockyards court and heard their children, in tears, beg the judge to "send them away." Last night two homes at 4841 South Bishop street were motherless, but calmer, cleaner, and perhaps even happier behind the sober faces of the self-reliant youngsters.

Mrs. Josephine Gander, 39 years old, had long neglected her family of five children for habitual tippling, Judge Lupe was told. But it was not until the flat above her own became vacant, and Mrs. Nellie Komperda, 35 years old, moved in with her three boys, that the situation became unbearable, her own daughter said yesterday.

Boy Follows Mother.

The two mothers left their homes together Thursday night. John Gander, 14 years old, slipped out and followed them. At 5336 South Bishop street they met a man who gave his name in court yesterday as John Whers, 46 years old, who carried with him a supply of gin. John reported his mother's actions to his father.

New City police walked into the house at 5336 South Bishop street and arrested the trio, who were sitting around a table consuming the supply provided by Whers. Patrolman Bernard Victory took them into custody.

In court yesterday morning the children and one father were lined up one side on the bench, the two mothers on the other. Mrs. Gander, enraged at her son's action, refused to speak to her children despite the pleading of her oldest daughter, Helen, a pretty girl of 17. It was her initial appearance in court.

Must Be Sent Away.

Judge Lupe listened to the tearful tale of John Gander and of the arresting policeman. Then he said:

"You two women are in such a condition from alcohol that I feel it imperative to send you where something will be done for you. So I am committing you to the Bridewell hospital for thirty days, where you will be given treatment for this craving. I am not doing this with the idea of punishing you. The punishment should be meted out to the man who furnished you the alcohol. Now, if I fine these two women, can I depend on it that the families will not pay the fine?"

Frank Gander stepped forward and pledged his word that he would not pay his wife's fine of $10. Mrs. Komperda was fined $25, as this is not her first offense.

Gives Care to Children

With her dark eyes brimming with tears, Helen Gander assured Judge Lupe that she would give up her position in a factory and take her mother's place caring for her younger brothers and sisters. The three Komperda boys, John, 13; Jerry, 9, and Joe, 4, said they would get along with their father's help, as they have done before.

"Mrs. Komperda knew all the places around here, and she used to take mother with her," John Gander explained yesterday in the kitchen of his own home. He was almost as busy in his own way as was Helen.

"We'll get along," she said as she deftly bundled up a strip of soiled paper off a shelf and spread a sheet of crisp new crêpe paper. "I can cook and do the housework, and I hope when mother comes back she'll be all right again. She wouldn't speak to me this morning in court, but don't you think she'll be all right when she gets back from the hospital?"

Our First "Talkie"

Filming of the first talking movie made in Chicago, which will form a prologue for the movie drama, "Behind the Footlights," was completed yesterday. The personnel of the Chicago Civic Opera company, including stars, conductors, ballet dancers, and chorus, composed the cast of the picture, with Miss Joan Beyerle in the stellar rôle as "Miss I Will." Others in the cast are Samuel Insull, Herbert M. Johnson, business manager of the opera company, and Giorgio Polacco, conductor.

ASKS $110,000 FROM WIFE ON PRENUPTIAL PACT

Mate Says She Offered Half of Income.

A suit for an accounting to enforce the terms of a prenuptial agreement by which he was to receive $110,000 from a $250,000 settlement made to his wife by her first husband was filed yesterday in the Superior court by Harry Goldblatt, 7119 East End avenue, against Mrs. Sadie Kaplan O'Connell Goldblatt, 6832 Clyde avenue.

The action, the first of its kind in Cook county courts, is based on the theory that in gaining emancipation as expressed in smoking, drinking, and engaging in men's work women should not be exempted by masculine chivalry from fulfillment of contracts.

The Goldblatts were married on July 19, 1929. Mrs. Goldblatt was formerly the wife of John Everett O'Connell, member of the brokerage firm of Brunswick, O'Connell & Co., and part owner of the Chicago Beach hotel. She won a divorce from O'Connell on charges of cruelty on July 2, 1928, after he had dismissed charges in an answer to her bill, alleging that she made a false attempt at suicide to extort $500,000 from him. O'Connell made a settlement of $250,000, to be paid his wife at the rate of $200 a month and $5,000 at the end of each year.

Pre-Nuptial Agreement.

Goldblatt was a clothing salesman. Because he was forced to work nights, his prospective wife urged him to give up his employment so that he could be with her more often, the bill states. As an inducement to encourage him to enter another business she is said to have signed the prenuptial agreement.

Under the terms of the agreement Goldblatt was to receive half of his wife's income from the former husband, according to the bill. At the time of their marriage she had already received $30,000, so that his share was to apply only to the balance of $220,000. Goldblatt says he purchased an automobile for their honeymoon tour of the country and also a ring valued at $600 and a brooch at $325. He also asserts that he spent $1,500 in furnishing their home.

Says She Brought Family.

On their return to Chicago Mrs. Goldblatt is alleged to have invited her brother, his wife, and two grown daughters to live with them. These relations, Goldblatt charges, made his life unbearable, and he left his wife on Nov. 12. Several days later he phoned her to say that he would return if the relatives would leave, according to the bill. The wife is said to have told him not to bother.

Goldblatt asks an accounting of the funds in possession of the Foreman State bank and the appointment of a receiver for them. He also asks an injunction to restrain the banks from making payments to his wife and names the former husband as a co-defendant.

Robber Forces Loop Cafe Owner to Open Safe

A robber who entered the Brown & McKinnon restaurant at 161 North Wabash avenue last night as it was being closed forced M. R. McKinnon, one of the owners, into a washroom and demanded the combination to the safe. McKinnon gave him false numbers and the robber worked for several minutes trying to open the door. Then he ordered McKinnon out of the washroom and, threatening to kill him if he hesitated, compelled him to open the safe. The robber fled with $200 after the door was opened.

PERJURY CHARGES AGAINST PANTAGES WITNESS DISMISSED

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 31.—(AP)—Perjury charges against Garland Biffle, law book salesman, which grew out of the assault trial of Alexander Pantages, multi-millionaire theater man, were dismissed by the Superior court today. Biffle had been tried twice on the charges, both juries failing to agree upon verdicts.

Biffle was a witness for Pantages. By his testimony the defense sought unsuccessfully to show that the theater man was a victim of a blackmail plot participated in by Miss Eunice Pringle, 17 year old dancer. Pantages was convicted and sentenced to from one to fifty years in prison for assaulting Miss Pringle.

MRS. JACK VILAS, AVIATOR'S WIFE, SEEKS DIVORCE

Mrs. Susanne Wharton Vilas, who became the wife of Logan A. (Jack) Vilas, one of Chicago's pioneer aviators, after a courtship in the skies, has filed suit for divorce, it was learned here last night. The suit was filed a week ago in Hot Springs, Ark., where the Vilases and their three children have lived for several years.

Mrs. Vilas charges cruelty in her bill. She has obtained a temporary injunction restraining Vilas from disposing of $100,000 worth of his property pending the outcome of the divorce action.

Vilas has retained Attorney John J. McMahon of Chicago to represent him in the court fight which is expected to develop over an alimony settlement. The wife contends that Vilas is worth more than a million dollars. They were married in 1913.

U. S. JUDGE HITS FLOOD OF MINOR DRY LAW CASES

Criticizing federal prosecutors for filling the federal courts with petty prohibition cases, Federal Judge Carpenter remarked from the bench yesterday that ninety per cent of the cases he has handled during the last month could have been taken care of by his secretary "as well as I could, if not better."

"I have had a fine petit jury idle for nearly the entire month," the judge said, "simply because the federal court calendar is filled with minor cases in which pleas of guilty are entered. The district attorney's office is not to blame, for the trouble goes back to the attorney general's office at Washington. The big bootleggers should be brought in here, not the human derelicts they hire to work for them."

[Copyright: 1930: By the New York Times.]

BUDAPEST, Jan. 31.—Because an audience protested that her dress was cut too low in the back, Irene Palasty, well known European actress and the wife of the German-American theater manager, Hans Bartsch, was arrested as she was leaving the Civic theater.

Mrs. Bartsch, being an American citizen, requested the help of the American consul. She explained that the evening dress was a creation of a Paris dressmaker and had won a prize recently at the Berlin opera ball.

It is made of white silver lamé and bird of paradise feathers, and its decency was established by the fact that it included a feather cape, she contended.

Heart Disease Patient Kills Self in Hospital

Before two nurses could stop him, Jacob Cohen, 47 years old, 925 South Hermitage avenue, stabbed himself to death with a penknife in the Lutheran Memorial hospital last night. Cohen had been a patient in the hospital since Dec. 23 and had suffered from heart disease for nine years.

HERO IN GLIDER DROPS 3,000 FT. FROM DIRIGIBLE

New York, Jan. 31.—[Special.]—While the dirigible Los Angeles was cruising 3,000 feet above the naval air station at Lakehurst today with the navy blimps J-3 and J-4, and the metal ship ZMC-2 hovering about her, a tiny apparatus flew from the Los Angeles' keel, nosed clear, and leveled off in the air. The first glider ever to be launched from an airship had taken off successfully.

Seated in the 200 pound glider was Lieut. Ralph S. Barnaby, who weighs 146 pounds and is the only licensed glider pilot in the navy. An eight knot breeze was blowing and conditions were ideal for the test. In a series of graceful circles the tiny glider maneuvered above the Lakehurst field, crossing it twelve times before Lieut. Barnaby landed. 12 minutes after he had been released from the dirigible.

"I could have remained aloft an hour or more had I desired," he said.

How It Was Done.

While the Los Angeles was making altitude, Lieut. Barnaby rode in the dirigible with the other officers. When 3,000 feet had been reached he climbed into the glider, which was suspended to a cross bar close to the Los Angeles' keel amidships. The releasing mechanism, similar in operation to a bomb release gear, was operated by a member of the crew.

The glider used by Lieut. Barnaby, recently purchased by the navy, was made in Germany, and is classified as of the secondary training type. It is a monoplane. The same glider was used by Lieut. Barnaby last summer at Cape Cod, when he qualified for the first glider license issued in this country.

He's a Glider Expert.

Barnaby has been experimenting with gliders since 1909.

He is attached to the naval bureau of aeronautics in Washington, where he is in charge of all glider work.

Author of "Bad Babies" Given 90 Day Jail Term

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—George Scarborough, author of the show, "Bad Babies," which was found by a jury to be an indecent stage performance, today was given a ninety day jail sentence by Municipal Judge Charles Bogue. The judge denounced the author, the cast and the persons who went to see the show, which showed a rendezvous between high school girls and young gangsters in a flat near a school building. Johnny Ralston, screen star, Elinor Flinn, Arthur Rankin, Annette Westby and Norman Peck of the cast were fined $300 each.

MERCURY SLIDES ON A 67 DEGREE SCALE IN MONTH

Chicago experienced a temperature range of 67 degrees during January, according to figures in the monthly summary issued by the weather bureau last night. From a maximum of 51 degrees on the 6th the mercury shrank to a record low mark of 16 below on the 18th.

Until Jan. 14 the mean daily temperature had been 7 points above normal, which is 23.7 degrees. But the mid-January wave of subzero weather, followed shortly by a second cold wave, reduced the mean for 30 days, excluding yesterday, to 20.2 degrees, or 3.5 points below normal.

Snowfall was also excessive during the month, the total being 14.2 inches, or 4.9 inches more than normal. The total for the month was less, however, than the fall on two December days, the 19th and 20th, when a record fall of 14.8 inches of snow piled up. Sunshine was normal for the month, the sun having shone during 45 per cen of the time possible.

STRAY BULLET CAUSES DEATH.

Blood poisoning, developing after he was wounded in the leg by a stray bullet last Wednesday, resulted in death yesterday at the County hospital for Walter Sherman, 47 year old Negro of 4137 South Dearborn street.

PRESTON DENIED NEW TRIAL; WILL DIE ON FEB. 19

Circuit Judge William J. Fulton of Wheaton denied a new trial yesterday to John Preston, Chicago house painter, who was convicted of the murder of Miss Agnes Johnston, 26 year old Chicago stenographer, and sentenced him to die in the electric chair at Joliet penitentiary at 10 a. m., Feb. 19.

Preston's wife, Lillian, who had called him a model husband, controlled her emotions as sentence was pronounced. The prisoner grew pale, but made no other sign. His sister, Miss Irene Preston of St. Paul, cried out as he was led away to be placed aboard a train.

The slaying, in which Miss Johnston was beaten, criminally assaulted and strangled, was the climax of a Saturday night party on which the girl and her cousin, Miss Mathilda Murphy, went at Preston's invitation, not knowing he was married. Miss Johnston's body was found in a clump of bushes off a Du Page county road after Miss Murphy had fled for help.

FRENCH DEMAND 800,000 TONS OF WAR VESSELS

Conference Gets Its First Concrete Proposal.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 31.—The five power naval conference, after nearly a fortnight of fencing and shadow boxing, has, at last got something to bite on. This is the result of the first meeting today of the committee to which the French transactional proposal, accepted in principle at yesterday's plenary meeting, was referred. Details of this proposal are now in the hands of the delegates and experts. The committee will meet again next Tuesday, when it is expected that every one will be ready to discuss the plan in detail.

It is necessary, in order to clear up confusion, to explain that the special committee which it was decided to appoint for this purpose at yesterday's meeting has not been appointed, and seems to have died aborning. This was due, it is said, to the protests of the British dominions, who were being left out.

First Committee Competent.

Prime Minister MacDonald then discovered that there was no real need for a special committee, as the first committee, which is a committee of the whole and has the right to call in experts or any one it likes, was competent to deal with all matters, and there is no reason why all delegates should attend every meeting unless they are interested.

The procedure, therefore, is to deal with all matters at the sessions of the first committee, which will only be attended at each meeting by interested delegates and by experts. This was explained by Mr. MacDonald this afternoon when the first committee met at St. James's palace.

After the agenda had been read it was decided to invite Eric Colban, observer for the league of nations, to be present at the committee meetings.

British Position Outlined.

A. V. Alexander, first lord of the British admiralty, opened the proceedings by restating the British position. Great Britain, he declared, preferred the categorical method of limitation rather than the global tonnage scheme, but recognized that France's special needs must be met.

Therefore, he said, the British are willing to consider the French compromise proposal sympathetically. He made it clear, however, that Great Britain is not pledged to accept this proposal until the matter has been thrashed out in detail and the views of the other countries are made known.

Mr. Alexander said the British also wanted to know how much tonnage each nation wanted, and what percentage they demanded for transfer to other categories.

"Let's Go," Tardieu Says.

Premier Tardieu of France followed. He said it was time to get down to brass tacks, and promised to lay the French proposals on the table immediately.

Admiral Cirriani, for Italy, said that Italy thought the category system to be on the whole the most logical. But, he pointed out, the special needs of the smaller naval powers may be more easily dealt with under the global tonnage system. He said that in practice, however, Italy was inclined to favor the compromise.

Then Count Rene Massigli, for the French, read the terms of the proposal, after which Secretary of the Navy Charles Francis Adams spoke for America. He favored the category system, but reserved the decision of America until the matter has been fully discussed. Adjournment was then taken until Tuesday, when the meantime the delegates will study the French plan.

France Demands 800,000 Tons.

This plan follows very closely the outline given last night, but the French have added figures which enable the delegates to have something to start from. France's demands for total or global tonnage are 800,000 tons, divided as follows:

Capital ships, 175,000 tons.
Aircraft carriers, 60,000 tons.
Large cruisers of 10,000 tons mounting more than six inch guns, 120,000 tons.
Surface ships mounting less than six inch guns, 210,000 tons.
Mine sweepers and other auxiliaries, 30,000 tons.
Submarines of large size, 30,000 tons.
Submarines of smaller size, 90,000 tons.

France also wants a number of ships specially adapted for service in the colonies. She is willing to limit her demand for transfer tonnage to ships carrying six inch guns or less, and suggests as a condition that 12 months' notice of any change must be given before new ships are laid down.

The thorny question of Italian-French parity remains to be settled, but it is reported that an effort is being made to deal with this in private sessions over the coming weekend.

The entire British empire delegation met this morning at St. James's palace. This was explained to be merely a routine meeting, like those held by the other delegations every day in their hotels.

The Japanese today denied that they intended to raise the question of the Singapore naval base, declaring that they had little interest in it.

In a written answer to the house of commons today A. V. Alexander, first lord of the admiralty, gave the particulars of the original 1929-'30 building program for the navy and its modification. The program originally provided for three cruisers, one flotilla leader, eight destroyers, six submarines, one net layer, and target tower sloops.

The government has canceled two cruisers, four destroyers, one net layer, two target sloops, and three submarines. The remaining three submarines are being held up pending the result of the naval conference.

Aristide Briand, French foreign minister, left for Paris today. Premier Tardieu will go tomorrow to take care of political engagements at home. Both will return to London next week. Meantime George Laygues, minister of marine, will lead the French delegation.

Disarm! Don't Disarm! U. S. Women Cry to Navy Parley

LONDON, Jan. 31.—(AP)—The women interested in the naval conference are getting into their stride, both politically and socially.

The arrival today of delegates from women's organizations of three countries brought into play the attitude of their members in the United States, Great Britain, France, and Japan, who are hoping their petition to the conference asking drastic naval reductions will have some part in impressing upon the delegates the belief of these women in world peace.

30,000 Signatures.

Mrs. Edgerton Parsons, heading the American women's delegation consisting of Mrs. Casper Whitney and Miss Josephine Schein, visited Ambassador Dawes and Secretary Stimson, telling them of their mission and giving them an outline of a memorial containing the signatures of 30,000 women. These signatures are those of officers of women's clubs numbering 6,000,000 women.

Mrs. Parsons said later that both of the American delegates expressed great interest in the women's petition as representing the bulk of public opinion in the matter of armaments reduction.

Secretary Stimson and Ambassador Dawes were both represented as hopeful the women will be granted an audience by a plenary session of the conference.

Two Japanese women accompanied the Americans, having in their care an enormous trunk in which was a petition carrying the signatures of 150,000 Japanese women. The petition asked the conference "to lay the foundation for established permanent peace."

Mrs. Tsune Gauntliet interviewed former Premier Wakatsuki and Admiral Takarabe and reported the same favorable reception as did the Americans. Further impetus was added to the British women's peace crusade by a meeting of the Women's Liberal association today when a resolution was adopted asking "the drastic limitation of naval armaments as a step toward the ultimate abandonment of all weapons of war."

Cuban Women Cable Petition.

HAVANA, Cuba., Jan. 31.—(AP)—A cablegram addressed to the delegates of the London naval disarmament conference by the Cuban National Feminist alliance today urged them to adopt "all measures of transcendental importance, such as naval limitation, which would do away with wars and which would promote national ambitions through high ideals of humanity and justice with guarantees of universal peace."

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—A resolution urging the American delegation at the London naval reduction conference to refrain from agreeing to any naval reductions treaty unless the United States is guaranteed "proportional parity, ship for ship and ton for ton" with the strongest naval power, was adopted today by the women's patriotic conference on national defense.

The delegates, representing forty patriotic societies, also voted to endorse a resolution placing the organization on record as opposed to "the commitment of the United States to entangling alliances which could operate to limit our full liberty of decision in international affairs."

Treaty Is Opposed.

The latter resolution was prompted by reports that attempts were being made at the London conference to persuade the United States to enter into political security treaties on which naval reduction agreements could be based. A member of the resolutions committee explained that the resolution was not to be interpreted as referring to such political controversial subjects as the world court.

Resolutions also were adopted placing the organization on record as urging extension of the immigration restriction policy to the western hemisphere, a rigid deportation law and opposition to recognition of soviet Russia.

The delegates voted to call upon affiliated groups to cooperate in combatting communist teachings in schools and colleges.

Pacifism Attacked.

Representative Melvin J. Maas [Rep., Minn.] warned the delegates against spurious peace movements and asserted that pacifism which merely demands that the United States disarm and provides no guarantee against war in the meantime "is not peace, but a very dangerous and misleading substitute.

"Every genuine and sincere effort to promote real peace should be fostered," the Minnesota representative said in a short address. "But eternal vigilance must be maintained to expose spurious peace movements, which, under the cloak of reflected respectability are in reality vitious, deliberate attempts to render America impotent."

"A police officer without a gun has as much terror for a thug as a sheep has for a wolf. So, too, a nation without the means of protecting its rights enjoins only contempt and mockery to itself."

Man, 71, Held by U. S. for $10 Hair Tonic Swindle

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—A 71 year old man is in the county jail awaiting removal to the federal court in New York as a result of swindling a New York newspaper advertiser out of $10. It is charged the man, Frank A. Hanscom, alias Harrison, used the mails to fraudulently obtain $10 from Murray L. Lindsay, New York hair tonic manufacturer, who had advertised for a man with $10,000 to invest in the business.

Killed by Engine Fumes as He Works on His Auto

William Schoenwald, 39 years old, was asphyxiated by carbon monoxide gas last night as he was working on his automobile with the engine running in the garage at his home at 1226 North Taylor avenue, Oak Park. He had closed the doors of the garage because of the cold. His wife found his body, and a fire department pulmotor squad was called, but the firemen were unable to revive him.

Italy Raises Navy Budget for 1930-'31 to $77,682,032

ROME, Jan. 31.—(AP)—The Italian naval budget for 1930-'31, made public today, calls for expenditure of $77,682,032, which is about $1,826,800 more than last year's. A good portion of this increase is laid out in higher rates of pay for the personnel of the navy. About $250,000 of it is earmarked for "exigencies of military defense."

SAY PRISONER OFFERED BRIBE FOR FREEDOM

Ralph Pierce, 25 years old, and Murray Humphreys, business agent for the Billposters' union, were arrested yesterday by Detectives Louis Capparalli and Michael Casey of the state's attorney's office. The detectives arrested the men at the Paxton hotel where they shared a room.

Two loaded revolvers were found in the room and Humphreys had a pistol in his possession, the detectives said. Both men were taken to the office of Chief Investigator Pat Roche, but denied any knowledge of recent robberies on the near north side.

The detectives said that Humphrey held out an inducement of $1,000 to them for his liberty and suggested that inasmuch as they have not been paid for some time the money might come in handy. They refused. Pierce was involved in the Elier investigations and was also sought as a suspect in the $1,000 robbery of the private bank of Joseph Fekete & Son, 2321 West Chicago avenue. An official of the bank, however, failed to identify him.

PARITY FOR U. S.? AH, YES! BUT IT'S THE BRITISH KIND

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 31.—Parity? Ah, yes, parity. But parity in a Pickwickian sense. That appears to be the kind of naval parity America is to be vouchsafed by the mistress of the seas at the London naval conference.

The horrid truth began seeping out today as the conference met to devise a method for limitation of cruisers and other auxiliary warships. The fact is that, notwithstanding Prime Minister MacDonald's doubtless sincere assurances to America of parity "in a full measure and running over," the British admiralty at no time has intended to accord the United States equality in naval power.

"A Mischievous Catchword."

The London papers are beginning to refer to parity as "a mischievous catchword." The attitude of British statesmen, with the exception of Mr. MacDonald, toward the establishment of Anglo-American naval parity is frankly cynical and is reflected in the attitude of the British public.

To give the Americans what looks like parity but is not and send them home happy with their new toy is what is demanded of British statesmanship by the average Englishman, who cannot conceive of a scheme as fair in which Brittania does not rule the waves.

Top Heavy Merchant Marine.

It is already apparent that the parity proffered America is no parity of Anglo-American sea power, for the tremendously important element of British sea power is the British merchant marine, which trebles the American merchant marine in the number and tonnage of vessels. Moreover, Great Britain possesses 227 merchant men capable of mounting six inch guns, compared to 70 such ships in the American merchant marine.

Nor is it to be a parity in the power of the two navies to protect the commerce of their respective countries in distant regions. For Great Britain has 27 naval bases scattered around the globe from which small cruisers can be operated for protection of its shipping, while America has but seven, only three of which are properly equipped for such a purpose.

U. S. Needs Big Cruisers.

If the disparity in bases is sufficiently taken into account a true naval parity will require a far greater preponderance for America in long cruising range big cruisers than the excess three the MacDonald government has conceded, or even the excess six the Hoover administration is holding out for. For every two cruisers operating far from our bases it is necessary to have five other cruisers available. Hence, the 21 cruisers the Hoover administration has come down to will provide only eight cruisers for operations, say, 2,000 miles from the base.

Great Britain with the 15 big cruisers conceded by President Hoover, operating in no case more than 1,000 miles from a base, will have an actual preponderance in big cruiser strength in addition to more than twice that number of small cruisers.

That the British admiralty has adroitly maneuvered America again into a renunciation of its navy building program and acceptance of an actual naval inferiority to Great Britain under the guise of parity is demonstrated by the expert British evaluation of the allocation of big cruisers and little cruisers in the agreement reached between President Hoover and Mr. MacDonald.

Viscount Bridgeman, former first lord of the British admiralty, disclosed at Geneva in 1927 that the British navy estimates a 10,000 ton eight inch gun cruiser two and one-half times as powerful as a 6,000 ton cruiser with six inch guns. On that basis the 15 big cruisers allotted Great Britain in the Hoover-MacDonald agreement are equal to thirty-seven and one-half small cruisers. With 35 small cruisers in addition, Great Britain would have a cruiser strength equivalent to seventy-two and one-half ships.

U. S. Loses Anyway.

With the 18 big cruisers to which the British seek to hold America and 18 small ones, America would have a cruiser strength equivalent to 63 ships, or nearly 10 less than Great Britain's. Even if America got the 21 contended for and 15 small ones, our cruiser strength would be equivalent to sixty-seven and one-half ships, or five less than the British, under Great Britain's own evaluation.

Britain Backs U. S. Navy Policy, Chicagoans Told

J. Hugh Edwards, M. P., biographer of Lloyd George, told members of the Executives' club yesterday Great Britain would align itself with the United States all through the naval limitations parley now proceeding in London. Mr. Edwards spoke at a luncheon in the Hotel Sherman. He said: "Chicago's latest murder has a place in London's journals the very day it appears in this city's newspapers. Our king's voice was heard all over the world when he opened the naval conference, and the same movies are shown in old and New York, Peking and Peoria, Dublin and Detroit. Physically the world is a unit now, and Great Britain is ready to cooperate with the United States in an effort to make it a political unit, also."

AMERICAN WOMEN GIVE PARTY; BRITISH GOBBLE UP SWEETS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 31.—In true Rotary club style, 200 guests of the American Women's club at a tea party today in honor of the women of the United States naval delegation wore labels pinned to their coats or hats with their names clearly printed on them.

Rows of gilt chairs were placed in a circle in the ballroom of the club. Inside this circle were the wives of the delegates. Outside was a writhing mêlée of hungry and curious women, struggling to spy the notables close up and to grab refreshments. The buffet contained an enormous variety of cream filled cakes, which were gobbled up by the Britishers, who are not accustomed to such rich dainties these days when every one is trying to keep slim.

Mrs. Henry L. Stimson and Mrs. Hugh Gibson received the guests with Mrs. Curtis Brown, president of the club. The other American women present included Mrs. Charles Francis Adams, Mrs. Joseph T. Robinson, Mrs. William Pratt, Mrs. Dwight Morrow, Mrs. David A. Reed, Mrs. Hilary P. Jones, Mrs. Harold C. Train, Mrs. J. R. Pringle and Mrs. A. T. Van Keuren.

FRANCE PLANS TO PUT ITS TONNAGE INTO SUPERSHIPS

Will Be Rivals to German Ersatz Preussen.

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 31.—France intends to concentrate a large portion of the 175,000 tons of capital ships—which she demanded at the naval conference today—into a squadron of armored super cruisers, mounting 11 or 12 inch guns, to "combat" the Ersatz Preussen class now under construction in Germany.

It is expected that the new French craft will be in the neighborhood of 15,000 tons each, as France does not possess the secrets of the German welding process or the new aluminum which withstands sea water and air, as well as other refined improvements that the Germans are incorporating in their pocket battleships.

May Build Seven or Eight.

As Germany is entitled to maintain six of this type of ship under the Versailles treaty, the French government contemplates building at least an equal number, and maybe seven or eight of them.

Tentative plans for the construction of such vessels are in preparation, and a place is being reserved for them in the schedule of capital ships that France will fill out in accordance with the Tardieu plan which was submitted to the conference.

Besides being heavier than the Ersatz Preussen type, the French ships, as projected, will attain a greater speed than the German government has announced for the pocket battleship—26 knots. The St. Nazarre navy yard is understood to have guaranteed close to 30 knots for the type of ship that is envisaged within a short cruising radius.

Wants 12 Big Cruisers.

France also plans to build a squadron of twelve maximum size eight inch gun cruisers, thereby attaining a 4-5 ratio with the 15 cruisers that Great Britain is expected to have under the MacDonald-Hoover proposals. Seven of these have already been completed; three others are under construction and two are projected.

France's submarine program approaches that of the United States in total strength, calling for an eventual flotilla of more than 100 submersibles—half of them to be large seagoing craft, and the balance to be smaller coastal divers. The total tonnage allocated to submersibles approximates 130,000 tons, with the largest of the units weighing 3,000 tons each.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—A pair of love birds given to a Jewish girl on her bethrotal, according to Jewish custom, infected her with psittacosis [also called parrot disease] it was revealed in a discussion of the disease by the Royal Society of Medicine and reported in the British Medical Journal. Dr. Robert Hutchison said a case came under his observation in a London hospital early in December.

SMOKE MENACES FAMILIES AS FIRE SWEEPS BUILDING

Several families narrowly escaped being overcome yesterday when smoke and flames swept through a two story office and apartment building at 3618-20 Milwaukee avenue and caused a loss estimated at $50,000.

By the time the first fire apparatus had arrived the flames had gained such headway that a 3-11 alarm was sounded and Fire Marshal Corrigan took charge of the fire fighters. Members of the family of Mrs. Sophie Terman, owner of the building, were asleep in their flat when the fire broke out. They were helped to safety by William Galliani, owner of a confectionery at 3608 Milwaukee avenue, who placed a long ladder against a window of the Terman apartment.

Smoke was carried across the street into the Carl Schurz school, but the students remained in their classrooms. The fire is believed to have started in the boiler room. Milwaukee avenue traffic was tied up for several blocks.

GRUNDYISMS ON HOOVER, TARIFF ARE UNEARTHED

Views of '28 Resurrected in Lobby Quiz.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.—[Special.] — Preinauguration impressions of the President he raised nearly $1,000,000 to elect were resurrected today by the senate's lobby investigating committee to plague Senator Joseph R. Grundy [Rep., Pa.].

Seaching through minutes of meetings of the National Association of Wool Manufacturers, the investigators came upon a transcript of an address made in December, 1928, by Grundy, then the master lobbyist for eastern industry, expressing grave doubt that Mr. Hoover was capable of dealing with tariff problems.

What worried "Old Joe," apparently, according to the address, as read into the committee's record, was that Mr. Hoover, instead of buckling right down after the election to a study of the proposed tariff revision, in which Grundy and his interests were vitally concerned, went on a South American "good will" tour.

Goes to South America.

"Now," said Grundy, himself a wool manufacturer, in the address, recalling the 1922 tariff struggle, "we won out by a substantial majority this time, and since the election, what has taken place? Our President-elect has slipped out of the country and has gone down to South America on other kinds of business. He won't be back here until January."

"My concern," continued Grundy, "is not lessened at all by the knowledge that the President-elect, while he is a very fine fellow, has never had any legislative experience. He never ran for office before. He never ran for even the office of dog catcher. He doesn't know anything at all, from experience, of what legislation means. His mind runs on other subjects than economic subjects.

"We have had hard enough times when we have had Presidents who have had experience in economic problems, with tariff and taxation and things like that, let alone a man who has never had any business of that kind, to get what we know is essential for the continuance of our business."

"Backward States" Recalled.

Portions of the address as read recalled vividly to the senators and spectators, Grundy's testimony when he appeared before the committee and bluntly asserted his opinion that the "backward states" of the south and west who contribute little proportionately to the federal treasury should "talk darned small" in the consideration of major national policies.

"Why," he said to the wool manufacturers, "take the agricultural proposition. The agricultural interests of our country are worth ten or twelve billions, as against fifty billions of industrial value, and yet they will set up a terrible roar. They will commandeer these senators from the pocket boroughs of the west and they [the senators] will do anything at all for the farmers."

Grundy advised his listeners that years of experience as a lobbyist taught him that "the fellow who makes the most noise, makes the most demands, that keeps his problem in front all the time, gets service" from congress. At the time of Grundy's address, Mr. Hoover was supposed to be debating the wisdom of calling a special session of congress soon after his inauguration.

Declares for Action.

"There is no use," Grundy declared, "of our preparing schedules if we are going to allow congress to drift along and let somebody get to Mr. Hoover and influence him to let the thing go until fall, and not get it done as quickly as possible, as it ought to be done."

Grundy reminded the wool manufacturers—and this got a big laugh from the spectators when it was read today —"we have the electorate adulterated by about 40 per cent of the women, who never knew anything about the tariff, and because they have been led to believe that it makes things they buy cost more, are not sympathetic with us."

Grundy laughed good-naturedly when he was shown a copy of the transcript of his various statements and was asked to say whether developments since Mr. Hoover's inauguration have caused him to change his opinion of the President.

"If it's in the record, I must have said it," declared Grundy. "That was my appraisal in December, 1928, but I decline to be quoted on whether my opinion has changed since."

The minutes were submitted to the committee by Franklin W. Hobbs, president of the Wool Manufacturers' association.

ABLIN, 6 OTHERS INDICTED; ECHO OF EPICURE RAID

U. S. Charges They Possessed Liquor.

David [Cockeyed Mulligan Ablin, erstwhile proprietor of the Epicure club at 19 East Cedar street, and part owner of the Club Algiers, 667 St. Clair street, slipped further into trouble with the government yesterday when a federal grand jury returned an indictment charging him and six others with maintaining a nuisance and illegally possessing liquor.

Ablin's trouble with the dry law enforcers started last Dec. 3 when a squad of East Chicago avenue police entered the Epicure club and seized Harry Alexander, the club caretaker, and four gallons of whisky. Ablin and Alexander were arraigned the next day before United States Commissioner Walker. The Epicure was closed under a city zoning ordinance by Building Commissioner Paschen.

Ask Evidence Be Suppressed.

When the case came up again on Dec. 6 Ablin's counsel moved that the evidence be suppressed. The raid, the defense contended, was made without a search warrant and through cooperation of federal agents and the police. The case was then continued three times, until on Dec. 28 the prosecution discovered "Cockeyed Mulligan" was concealing the fact that the Epicure was owned by a corporation. The court ruled that Ablin, as an individual, could not protest the illegal seizure, and held him and Alexander to the District court under bonds of $1,000 each.

The other members of the corporation, Sam Ablin, David Zimmerman, Philip Harris, Harry Lewis, and Arthur Moore, were named in yesterday's indictment, as was Alexander.

Faces Additional Trouble.

Ablin faces a further investigation of his activity in supplying entertainment to night-minded citizens on March 3 when a petition for permanent closing orders against the Club Algiers comes up for hearing. The Algiers was raided by dry agents in December, 1928, and later a temporary injunction was obtained.

For nearly a year Nathan Schoenbrod, owner of the building which houses the Algiers, has thwarted government efforts to make the injunction permanent. Failing to serve court writs on him in person the government sought service by publication on Jan. 23, setting the case for the first day of the March court session.

Winnetka Borrows Water When Ice Cuts Off Supply

Winnetka's water supply was cut off for several hours yesterday morning when anchor ice completely blocked the intake of the city water system, 3,600 feet out in Lake Michigan. During that time, the village borrowed water from Glencoe through emergency lines until Gull Falcon, a professional diver, went to the bottom of the lake and cleared the ice from the screen. The ice was drawn from the surface by the suction created by the rush of water into the intake.

Recapture Leper Suspect Who Escaped Hospital

Placio Mendoza, 34 years old, 1313 South Peoria street, believed to be a leper, was guarded by police in his home last night until he was removed to the county hospital by health department physicians. Mendoza had bene under treatment as a leprosy suspect at the hospital until a week ago, when he escaped. He was recaptured at his home last night.

Waits in Vain

For three months 2 year old June Johnston has been in the Chicago Home for the Friendless at 5059 Vincennes avenue waiting for her parents to call for her. She does not know that the parents, Policeman Herbert Johnston and his wife, Gladys, have parted. The mother has called to see June only twice since the child was placed in the home by the Juvenile court, according to Mrs. Elizabeth Littler, superintendent of the home. "June is a pretty child with blue eyes and blond hair, and it is a shame her parents do not want her," said Mrs. Littler yesterday. "We hope to find both the father and mother. If we do not do so June will be placed out for adoption."

RUSSIA RECALLS ENVOY AND STAFF FROM MEXICO

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 31.—Alexander Makar, former Russian minister to Mexico, said today that he had received notice from the soviet government to return to Russia. He will do so as soon as it is possible, probably Feb. 10, when the next steamer sails for Europe. With Makar will go all the members of the staff.

That the break between Mexico and Russia is hopeless of being mended is evidenced by the fact that the former minister is taking all the embassy furniture, archives, and other effects.

POLICE WITHOUT CLEW IN PROBE OF TAXI KILLINGS

Checker Officials Promise to Aid Inquiry.

Police and prosecutors last night were without a clew to the slaying of Barney J. Mitchell, treasurer of the Checker Taxicab company, and Glenn Jackson, one of its drivers.

This was the state of affairs, although investigations were launched by John Egan, acting chief of detectives, by Lieut. Stephen Barry of the Rogers Park police district, in which the killings occurred, and by Patrick Roche, chief investigator for State's Attorney Swanson.

Mitchell and Jackson were slain a few minutes after the latter had called for Mitchell at the apartment of Robert McLaughlin, president of the taxicab company, at 1623 Lunt avenue some time after 3 a. m. Thursday. During the evening and into the morning Mitchell, with Harry I. Gordon, vice president of the company; Max Fuifman, secretary, and Attorney Samuel Weinshenker, legal representative, had attended a champagne party in McLaughlin's home. The party, it was stated, had been staged as a combination wedding anniversary and birthday party for McLaughlin.

Quizzed for Five Hours.

All the principals in the case early yesterday went with Attorney Leonard Reid, of the firm of Litsinger, Healy & Reid, to the detective bureau, where they surrendered themselves for questioning to the acting chief of detectives. Capt. Egan received them and soon afterward Assistant State's Attorney Harry Ditchburne was on the scene and a five hour conference with McLaughlin and the others was begun.

While the conference was on police squads were still searching for Robert (Frisco Dutch) Schmidt, former pal of McLaughlin's brother, Eugene (Red) McLaughlin, and known as a "muscle man" for the cab company. Schmidt once was tried for the murder of a former president of the company and acquitted. Police would not say they had any information whatever against Schmidt, but appeared to want him simply on his general record and reputation.

Police were inclined to the theory that the murder of Mitchell was an "inside job"; that is, it had some connection with the internal affairs of the taxicab concern. They also believed that Jackson was slain with Mitchell to keep him from becoming a witness against the killers.

Calls Affairs Running Smoothly.

McLaughlin, in the five hours' questioning, declared most emphatically that the affairs of the company had recently been more harmonious and smooth than ever.

"The motive for this shooting could not have come from within the company," McLaughlin said. "Some of Mitchell's personal affairs must be responsible, and it can't be otherwise. Everything is going smoothly in the company now. Our last election of officers was all over and done with in 45 minutes without the slightest bit of a hitch.

"Mitchell had been with the company for five years, and so far as I know, his finances were in excellent condition."

McLaughlin was said to have pledged himself to the police and to Prosecutor Ditchburne to make a personal investigation into the slaying of Mitchell. He was said to have told the authorities he believed he had sources of information which they could not have and that he believed he could find out who killed Mitchell and why.

"If I get the information I am going after," he was reported to have promised," I will sertainly bring it to police headquarters and to Mr. Ditchburne and then let things take their natural course."

Information given the police by some unrevealed source led them to start inquiries into Mitchell's affairs of a social nature. The information was said to have been vague and uncertain, however.

POLICEMAN DIES AFTER CHARGING POISONING PLOT

The inquest into the death of Policeman Augustine J. Healy, 31 years old, 6133 Kenmore avenue, who died early yesterday after a week's illness, was continued yesterday afternoon until Feb. 14 to permit an analysis by the coroner's chemists of the wine which is supposed to have caused his death. Healy, in the delirium which preceded his death, had charged that gangsters had "framed" him with poisoned wine but the police said he died of natural causes.

Healy, who was a chauffeur for Lieut. John Norton, served in the marine corps during the war and was gassed in France. Since that time he had not drunk intoxicating liquors, his physician having advised him not to take alcohol. On Jan. 23, however, he returned home with a gallon of wine, which a friend had given him, and being in low spirits, he drank a large quantity of the liquor, according to the police.

Immediately after his dinner, Healy became violently ill, apparently suffering from acute indigestion. The next day he was removed to the home of his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Healy, 5830 Roscoe street, and had been under a physician's care since then.

CENTURY CLUB'S PRIDE WOUNDED BY GIN CHARGES

Plebeian Tippling There? Even Windows Frown.

BY TOM PETTEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Even the stone guarded windows frowned today at the Century club. Never since it was founded in 1847 has the club's chaste dignity been so affronted. Gin, plebian gin served there? Why, the very table glasses themselves quivered with refined mirth at such an idea. Gin, aromatic, perfuming, pugnacious gin served at the Century club? Surely some one must be spoofing.

Such was the reaction this afternoon at 7 West 43d street to Senator Smith W. Brookhart's speech in Washington in which he charged that "real gin cocktails were served at the club's monthly dinners." At least that was the report that seeped through guarded doors—second handed information just as was that of Senator Brookhart.

Not a Chess Pawn Dropped.

Positively no sack cloth and ashes were ordered for repentant members. The club librarian merely ascertained that the senator was from Iowa and not a chess pawn was dropped.

"I have been a member of the club for years," said Oswald Garrison Villard, "and I never saw anything of the kind the senator charges."

Several other members called on the telephone confessed they "never went to Century dinners." That should signify something or other.

Charles A. Platt, the president, was not available nor was Nicholas Murray Butler, the vice president. George W. Wickersham, second vice president, who has been studying the prohibition situation for President Hoover, was not reached.

Door Man Says "No."

In fact, there was almost a minimum of excitement at the club and certainly a minimum of conversation. Doubt was expressed by questioners that the servant staff was equipped with vocal cords. The manager's office at the Century club called the entire matter "ridiculous." Heavy iron bars guarded the lower windows and something equally effective must have been attached to the door man's lower jaw for it would not work except to say "no" when reporters sought to pass through the stone facade.

"No search warrant can be obtained on mere hearsay evidence, even though it comes from a senator," was the decision reached by H. Schwartz, assistant federal attorney. "Of course now," said federal officers, "if some one would step up and swear he had bought drinks there in the last two weeks it would be a different matter.

Cites Earl Carroll Case.

Another federal officer with less respect for age and social standing and also with his tongue in his cheek said it would be possible to subpoena Centurians who had attended the dinner and put them under oath about the "service." It was done, he recalled, when Earl Carroll gave his bath tub party.

The consensus, however, was that Senator Brookhart had picked up the wrong club.

Safety Leaders Discuss Uniform Traffic Code

A subcommittee of the national conference on street safety met yesterday in the Palmer house and discussed recommendations for a uniform traffic code that will be considered at a meeting of the conference in Washington, D. C., in the spring. The chairman of the subcommittee is Dr. Miller McClintock, director of the Erskine bureau of Harvard university.

not countenance the return of the saloon. Without the saloon, he said, it would mean drinking at home.

"Well, if we're going to drink at home, we can do that now, if we want it bad enough to make it," continued Mr. Fort. "So why change the law at all unless, of course, we want hard liquor, and none of the advocates of change want that, do they? So, where do we finish? Just where we started, with the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act."

Missouri Wet Replies.

Representative L. C. Dyer [Rep., Mo.], an active wet and author of a 2.75 beer bill, said he construed Mr. Fort's speech as "an argument for the home manufacture and the drinking therein of any kind of intoxicating liquor or beverage."

"This, of course, must be done in the presence of women and children," said Mr. Dyer. "How much better would it be to permit the manufacture and sale of a non-intoxicating beverage to rid the homes of the making and drinking of intoxicating liquor therein."

Protests of industrial alcohol interests caused Representative William Williamson [Rep., S. D.], chairman of the house committee on expenditures in executive departments, to call a meeting of the committee for tomorrow to reconsider an amendment adopted yesterday to the bill to transfer the prohibition bureau from the treasury department to the department of justice.

Prefer Control by Treasury.

Under this amendment the attorney general would have control over the issuance of regulations for the use of industrial alcohol, although permits would be issued by the secretary of the treasury. The industrial alcohol interests object to this arrangement, preferring to have the secretary of the treasury retain complete control over the permissive part of prohibition enforcement.

Prohibition Commissioner James M. Doran announced that John F. J. Herbert, administrator for Montana and Idaho, has been ordered to come to Washington for investigation of charges involving his service while administrator of the Maryland and District of Columbia district. Senator Borah yesterday demanded that either Mr. Herbert be exonerated formally of charges against him or dismissed from the service.

WIFE DEFENDS LAWYER ACCUSED IN DIVORCE TRIAL

Declares Her Faith; Likes His Client.

"I'm sure of my husband—and I like Mrs. Arliskas!" Mrs. Myrtle Allman, wife of Attorney Patrick J. Allman, declared defiantly under cross-examination yesterday in the divorce hearing of Frank Arliskas, wealthy automobile dealer, who charged his wife, Patra, with infidelity and named her attorney, Allman, as correspondent.

Mrs. Allman, under direct examination by her husband, provided an alibi for him for at least four of the 31 dates on which Arliskas charges the attorney and Mrs. Arliskas went riding in her cocoa-colored cabriolet. A pretty dark-eyed girl, Mrs. Allman smiled and nodded when, after being sworn, she was asked by Allman, "You're my wife?"

Was Visiting Her, Wife Says.

On Oct. 12, when Allman and Mrs. Arliskas drove to Whiting and back, and visited a deserted stone quarry on their return, according to Arliskas' witnesses, the attorney was visiting her and her week-old baby in the South Chicago hospital, Mrs. Allman said.

On Dec. 6, she and her husband took Mrs. Arliskas to a movie, Mrs. Allman said. On the night of Dec. 7, when Allman and Mrs. Arliskas were charged with spooning in her car in front of 7911 Manistee avenue, they called for her at the opera at 11:30 o'clock, Mrs. Allman said. From there they went to a restaurant and, after picking up an acquaintance of Allman, drove to 7911 Manistee avenue, where the two men left the two women and went to a poker party at that address, she testified.

Introduced by Husband.

Cross-examined by Attorney Clarence N. Boord, she was asked who introduced her to Mrs. Arliskas. Her husband did, she said.

Q. Have you become intimate friends? A. Very intimate.

Q. You feel that she wouldn't do anything to hurt you? A. I should say she wouldn't.

Q.—How soon do your husband's card games start in the fall? A.—When it gets too cold to go to the dog tracks.

Q.—And was he ever out late when he wasn't playing cards? A.—No.

Q.—You're sure? A.—Whenever he was out late he was playing cards—because he told me.

"Object, unless she knew," said Attorney Boord.

Knows Husband as Truthful.

Whereat the witness' eyes flashed and with a withering glance at Attorney Boord, she said that what her husband told her, she knew to be true.

Mrs. Arliskas followed Mrs. Allman on the stand. She was dressed in the fourth dress she had worn in as many days of the court trial, a trailing dress of black chiffon dotted with silver, of the latest fashion. She wore a tight-fitting jade green hat and a mink coat. Mrs. Arliskas is 32.

Her youthful counsel, Allman, asked her earnestly if "on the dates, names and the places described by witnesses" she was with him alone.

"No, sir," she said in a flat monotone, her blue eyes on Judge Feinberg.

Never Went Alone.

Q.—Did you ever since the first day of July go out with me alone? A.—No, I didn't.

"And have I ever kissed you or have you ever kissed me?" the attorney asked sternly.

"No, sir," she said softly.

Q.—Did we ever do any petting or necking in your car? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Or anywhere? A.—No, sir.

Judge Feinberg then took a hand at questioning the witness. He asked her about the night of Dec. 7, if that were the only night when she and Allman had been in her car alone. She said it was.

Asks About Stone Quarry.

JUDGE FEINBERG—Did you ever drive into a stone quarry with him? A.—I don't even know where that stone quarry is.

He told her. Then he bid her to answer the question. No, she had never been there.

JUDGE FEINBERG—You remember a man, this man Bokhoyen [Bert Bokhoven] hiding in your rumble seat? A.—Yes, I certainly do.

She then said that her husband had told her he was going to have a man follow her, but that she had never seen any one follow her when she left home. She will be cross examined when the trial reopens on Tuesday.

When court opened yesterday, crowds fought to get in, according to Bailiff Louis Greene. After the hubbub subsided he picked up a number of fancy buttons from women's dresses.

Woman Falls or Jumps to Death from 19th Floor

New York, Jan. 31.—(AP)—Lucille M. Ryan, 25, whose home was said to be Susquehanna, Pa., was killed today in a fall from her room on the nineteenth floor of the American Woman's association clubhouse in West 57th street to a court.

DENY MANSLAUGHTER INDICTMENT OF DRYS WHO KILLED DOWNEY

Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 31.—(AP)—The grand jury today returned a no bill against the three members of the United States coast guard crew who killed Eugene F. Downey Jr. in the Buffalo harbor Christmas night. The charge was second degree manslaughter.

The refusal to indict Rudolph Thompson, Asa Ennis and Orville La Grant, the guardsmen, came as a surprise to District Attorney Guy B. Moore. He had declared he had enough evidence to indict.

Downey was shot through the leg, the coast guardsmen said, when he failed to halt his speedboat at their command. He or the man with him drove the motorboat to the dock at the foot of West Genesee street. Downey's companion escaped.

Downey was left lying in the boat for some time after the shooting. The bullet that struck his leg severed a large vein and he died after he was taken to a hospital.

The coast guardsmen were arrested, arraigned in City court and held for the grand jury. The action of the jury closes the case.

THREE MAN JURY TO DECIDE CIVIL CASE IN COURT

New System Adopted by City Tribunal.

Thirteen years after becoming a part of the Illinois statutes, the arbitration law, designed to expedite the handling of civil actions, has been adopted as one of the functions of the Chicago Municipal courts. Judges of the City courts at a meeting yesterday presided over by Chief Justice Harry Olson approved rules which will lead, it was announced, to the setting up of an "arbitration court" in the city hall on Feb. 10.

Chief Justice Olson said that he will preside at the first session of the new court, later appointing to it one of the Municipal judges. The law creating the court, enacted June 11, 1917, provides that civil suits may be tried before a jury of three experts, sitting either alone or under the jurisdiction of a judge. Every year thousands of disputes between business men, unions and employers, and between other types of civil litigants have been settled through the medium of the statute, Chief Justice Olson declared.

"More and more," he declared, "business men, unionists, large employers of labor, and other civil litigants, resorted to arbitration as a means of smoothing out their difficulties rather than drag their troubles through the snail like movement of our present courts with their awkward twelve men jury system.

"So it is time the city courts recognize this situation and adopt this law into our regular procedure. A three man jury is infinitely more workable than a twelve man jury, and I believe this system in time will be used in the thrashing out of all civil suits. Under the arbitration law, and in accordance with the set of rules we adopted today, the three arbitors or jurors may be selected in three ways: First, from a 'commercial jury list,' submitted by, for instance, the Chicago Association of Commerce; second, from the regular jury panel; third, by litigants."

The chief function of the judges will be to pass upon the admissability of evidence, the jurors passing on the merits of case, it was explained. Cases may be heard in secret, with no subsequent information furnished the press if any one of the litigants so wishes, the chief justice said. Labor jurisdictional disputes may come to be thrashed out before this branch of the municipal courts, Judge Olson declared.

WIFE HUNTS DRY SPY AS HE HUNTS JOB, SO ALL HE FINDS IS CELL

Lawrenceville, Ill., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Floyd Anderson, 34, of Mount Vernon, Ill., who worked as a liquor detective in that city and who applied to State's Attorney McGaughey for similar work here this morning, was returned to Jefferson county this afternoon to face charges of wife and child abandonment.

Anderson left Mount Vernon a week ago in search of employment as a prohibition sleuth. He didn't tell his wife or their three children.

His arrest here occurred as a result of information received from the Jefferson county state's attorney, Joe Allen, by Prosecutor McGaughey, yesterday. The prosecutor was prepared for Anderson upon his arrival and called Sheriff Fred James, who made the arrest.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL SYSTEM — COURTESY — EFFICIENT SERVICE — ALWAYS

Personal Service

The Illinois Central System will carry this year forty-five million passengers and sixty million tons of freight. This will require the services of fifty thousand workers operating facilities in which three-quarters of a billion dollars are invested. These large figures call for mass production of service, yet we expect every passenger and shipper to receive personal, individual attention.

Such service can be rendered only by a personnel that is capable, willing and ready. Ours is. Members of the Illinois Central organization are constantly performing services for Illinois Central patrons that are more than merely transportation. They do this to be helpful, but they know too that it is good business for the railroad and for them.

Passenger service provides many examples of such service. Children traveling alone are intrusted to our protection. Aged, invalid and inexperienced travelers are given personal attention en route and met by individual escorts at terminals. Tours are planned for vacationists—hotel reservations made, baggage checked, side trips arranged. Shipments of travelers' automobiles are carefully followed to make sure of scheduled arrival.

Personal service is no less important in the handling of freight. An Illinois Central bureau keeps records of car movements for the information of those interested. Shipments are expedited, diverted, reconsigned. Cars of perishable freight are iced. Livestock is watered and fed. Whatever the requirements of individual service may demand, we endeavor to meet those requirements.

Experienced patrons of the Illinois Central System are accustomed to expect personal service, and every member of the Illinois Central organization is expected to be qualified, willing and ready to render such service.

Constructive criticism and suggestions are invited.

L. A. DOWNS,
President, Illinois Central System.

Toils Hard to Evolve System of His Own.

BY JAY ALLEN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MADRID, Spain, Jan. 31.—The name of Primo de Rivera, the mildest dictator that history has produced, is mud in Spain today. What he did in his six years of good-natured absolutism cannot be undone in a day. Nobody wants to demolish the roads he built, nor the American telephone system he has installed, which is the best in Europe. And nobody could repair the breach he made in the country's finances.

But during the 24 hours that he has been in power the incoming dictator, Gen. Damaso Berenguer, has striven manfully to destroy any illusion that might still cling to the outgoing dictator and to conciliate the country in other ways, besides, for the sake of his uneasy king.

Primo's Picture to Ash Heap.

Twenty thousand big pictures of Primo de Rivera that were hung in public offices throughout the country today were consigned to the garbage dump by the new dictator's orders.

Gen. Berenguer also announced that Primo de Rivera's so-called sweeping reform of the judicial system had been wiped out. This includes the right of the government to override the decision of the Supreme court and the right of mayors to interfere with municipal courts.

At the end of a hard day's work Gen. Berenguer announced that the artillery officers punished for the Segovia revolt would be released from prison tomorrow morning, that the president of the striking university students would be recalled from exile in Majorca, that exiled professors had been pardoned and invited home to resume their teachings, and that the board of governors of the Antheneum Literary and Scientific society, the most liberal influence in Spain, which Gen. de Rivera threw out and replaced with Jesuits, would be reinstated.

Declares General Amnesty.

A general amnesty for Feb. 6, the first anniversary of the death of the queen mother, has been declared.

Nobody has failed to understand that King Alfonso and his new dictator have disavowed the old system. Gen. Berenguer said tonight he certainly would not unloose on the helpless country any of these thousand word pronouncements which Gen. de Rivera uncorked every week or so, usually saying he was about to resign. "Deeds and not words," said the dictator, invoking the old Spanish proverb.

Primo Sits and Ponders.

The usually expansive Primo sat at a window in the Fine Arts club this afternoon and watched the world with jaundiced eye, undoubtedly meditating on the fickleness of Spaniards. He liquidated the Moroccan mess. To save them from anarchy he drove the grafting politicians under cover, and for six years told them regularly in the papers, that could not print anything else, that he was a godsend to Spain.

Yet, students at Oviedo tonight made bonfires of the street signs on Calle Primo de Rivera. Students in Valencia and Salamanca held a mock funeral to celebrate his passing and burned his corpse. His Union Patriotica, which was sort of Tammany, has begun to disintegrate already. Hundreds of leading members are resigning.

The long stifled press is waiting word from Gen. Berenguer to further blacken Primo de Rivera's name by printing documented accounts of the scandals of his régime.

"Back to Normalcy."

"My program is back to normalcy," Gen. Berenguer said again today, and none failed to see the shadow of the repentant king behind him. But is King Alfonso repenting too late? That is the question asked everywhere.

Outside of satellites of the crown, nobody wants the flabby old constitution. Already there are cries of rage against a return of bossism, from which Spain suffered terribly, as the population is illiterate and superstitious.

Older statesmen, like Señor Sanchez, Señor Guerra, and Alexandre Lerroux, are demanding a constituent assembly to draw up a new constitution, a fearful prospect for King Alfonso.

He was arraigned in the felony court on charges of embezzlement of $22,000 from the insurance business of the alderman. Charges of forgery and carrying concealed weapons were not pressed in the felony court.

BERLIN, Jan. 31.—(AP)—At the German government's request, the ambassadors' conference has agreed to withdraw from Berlin the British and French military experts appointed when the inter-allied military commission was dissolved. Since then these experts have been keeping an eye on Germany's disarmament as directed in the treaty of Versailles.

LAW PENALIZES KENTUCKIAN IF HE MISSES MAN

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 31.—(AP)—In Kentucky, where it is a disgrace not to "get your man" when one goes gunning, marksmanship is encouraged by statute. This was revealed at a meeting of the senate criminal law committee when a bill introduced by C. R. Luker, Laurel, was being considered.

Senator Luker said that the present statutes provided that if a person shoots at another from ambush and misses him, the maximum penalty is ten years' imprisonment, but if the bullet hits the mark the maximum sentence is only five years.

No matter how seriously a man is wounded if shot from ambush, the maximum penalty is five years. If he dies, the slayer would be liable to the death penalty.

Not in sympathy with the state's encouragement of its sharpshooters, Luker has introduced a bill to correct this inconsistency. It was reported favorably by the committee yesterday.

MANY INJURED AS BULLETS FLY IN GERMAN RED RIOT

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HAMBURG, Germany, Jan. 31.—Shots were exchanged here again between communists and the police this afternoon when 3,000 Reds formed regular military squads and marched through the streets attacking the police, beating up the bourgeois, and trying to force the workers of big plants to join a general strike. Many were injured.

The entire police force was mobilized tonight for emergency duty.

The communists sent word to their friends in nearby towns to disregard police threats and smuggle themselves into this city to attend the "congress of revolutionary jobless" to be held tomorrow and the next day. Quite a number of them succeeded in slipping through the police lines.

Seized Red Plans.

In Berlin Red couriers were sent out from communist headquarters to order the communists to congregate secretly tomorrow for a surprise demonstration. The police nabbed several of these couriers and called in the reserves for emergency service tomorrow and on Sunday.

In Lichtenberg, communist suburb of Berlin, a gang of young jobless between the ages of 17 and 20 stormed a cooperative bakery this afternoon, seized bread and rolls, and escaped.

They usually get a warm meal each day from a relief organization. Agitators had told them the daily meal was not good enough for them and that hunger justified all actions. All small food shops in Lichtenberg put up iron grills on their windows fearing similar raids by other groups of jobless.

Arrest 76 Leaders.

Seventy-six heavily armed ringleaders of the communists were arrested in Berlin as they were plotting the last details of the riots they planned to stage tomorrow afternoon.

The police learned that the leaders of the movement had assembled in a saloon in the Langestrasse, together with several communistic members of the reichstag and the Prussian diet. Their spies listened to the communists issuing last minute instructions for the wholesale provocation of the police by a systematic organization of riots similar to those of "bloody" May 1 of last year, and then gave the signal for the arrests.

PRIVATE FIGHTS MUSS UP RACES FOR WARD POSTS

Paschen and Garner Go on Warpath.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Little private wars have started to dot the political battlefield. Early predictions that red hot fights over ward committeemanships would muss up the contests between candidates for Republican primary nominations were found yesterday to be approaching fulfillment.

Trouble has started on the west side and on the north side in the ranks of the so-called regular organization under the leadership of Chairman B. W. Snow. Some of it is traceable to the splitup in the shortlived Snow-Barrett-Brundage combination, it is said, but some of the scraps are charged up entirely to local rivalries between leaders.

Trade Candidates for Votes.

Two years ago, the first time there was an election of ward committeemen under the Schroeder primary law of 1927, the returns were read as indicating that candidates for places on the county committee had traded off candidates for offices in exchange for votes for themselves to such an extent that it amounted to knifing and scalping in some wards.

This year, even before the first filing day, experts read the signs as indicating that the situation will be far worse than in 1928, even though it is conceded that city hall patronage will elect enough ward chiefs to control the county body.

The flareup on the west side is charged to the appearance of petitions of John P. Garner for ward committeeman of the Thirty-seventh ward against the incumbent, Eden T. Brekke. One of the first comments heard was that such hostility might be considered unseemly since both men recently were appointed by Gov. Emmerson as members of the west park board.

Brekke Sticks to Snow.

Analysts immediately said that the Garner-Brekke battle was due to the fact that Brekke, previously considered a Barrett man, stuck by Snow when Barrett broke with the county chairman. Another theory was that Brekke was advancing too rapidly toward district leadership for a young man and that some of the veterans had determined to trim him down.

Whatever the cause of Garner's race, its announcement was followed at once by declarations that the Snow-Brekke combination on the west side will run candidates against several Barrett committeemen. Among those mentioned as victims for this retaliation were Paul Rothenberg, 24th ward, Thomas A. Brockmeyer, 34th, and John Dempsey, acting committeeman of the 38th.

On the north side much of the rumpus is charged to the indignation of Building Commissioner Paschen over the fact that he has not been slated for sheriff on the Snow ticket. There has been nobody put on for the place but it is understood that Snow and his closest associates look favorably on the idea of indorsing Maj. Carlos Ames, president of the city civil service commission, for it after all the filings are known.

Paschen Given Much Power.

Paschen, it is understood, has been groomed for north side leadership in the Snow organization in spite of his comparatively recent conversion from the principles of Democracy, and is said to have been intrusted with much of the responsibility for selecting the organization's choices for ward committeemen north of the river. But it if said that in some of the private meetings he called he expressed antipathy to the present leadership and indicated an intention of aiding the election of only such ward committeemen as would help him punish the organization bosses he charges broke faith with him.

Commissioner Paschen denied there is now any such intention on his part and also denied rumors that he still will enter the sheriff race.

His assignment from the organization is said to be to erase Brundage from the political map in that territory. But the Brundage forces continue to pursue their own way quietly. Yesterday they announced Herbert W. Auw as their candidate for the state senate from the 31st district against Senator Herman J. Haenisch.

This is the first day for filing state petitions with Secretary of State Stratton at Springfield and a number of messengers went to the capital yesterday to handle the matter for their organizations.

More on People's Ticket.

At a dinner at the Hotel La Salle attended by about 200 men and women, the People's Republican organization, incorporated last November, disclosed more of its candidates.

They were the following: County clerk, Robert J. Hunter; Criminal court clerk, Joseph A. Wise; sanitary trustees, Charles E. Serum, Michael J. Murphy, Frank Trautman, Walter E. Weiser and George W. Brunkhorst; county commissioners [city], Robert W. Stratton, Otto Fetting, Robert Kuhagen, Charles A. Wagner, Joseph F. Kane, Paul G. Miller, and Ernest H. Funke; county commissioners [country towns], A. Fred Kabana, Bernard H. Hoss and Ernest Siebold; chief justice Municipal court, James H. Turner.

WANT TO LOOK YOUNG?

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eye with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound as a substitute for calomel to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets are gentle in their action yet always effective. They help bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

WARDEN AT AUBURN DEFENDS REQUEST TO OPEN GATES IN RIOT

Auburn, N. Y., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Edgar S. Jennings, the gray haired ex-warden of the state prison here, explained today in Supreme court why he wrote the note to state troopers while convicts held him captive during the prison riots last December, begging that the gates be unlocked to let the prisoners out and save his life. It was a bluff.

"My belief was that the convicts wouldn't get beyond the incliosure," he declared. "I did not know what the method of rescue would be, but I knew the prisoners wouldn't get far."

It was after he had been held for an hour and a half that Warden Jennings wrote the note to the state troopers who blocked the convicts' avenue to freedom, ordering the jail gates opened.

He and seven guards were hostages in the hands of the mutineers just inside the guard room gate, which opened on the main corridor leading to the outer barrier. After the note was written the beslegers opened this inner gate and fell on the convicts with tear gas bombs as they came through it.

FATHER OF 33, HE'D WED AGAIN AT AGE OF 65

Columbus, O., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—James, Robert, William, Bertha, Martha, Matty, Hattie, Ruth, Precious, Pauline, Percy, Amanda, Samuel, David, Dan, Abraham, Haywood, Daisy, Eunice, Emma, Aileen, Morgan, Boston, Iveson, Idalee, and Willa May are only 26 children of the 33 fathered by Abraham Childs, a colored contractor.

The names of the other eight have been forgotten, Childs, who is 65, says.

He has had three wives and all are dead. He says he's willing to marry again if the right girl comes along.

necessary to do more than find the $4,196,067 to be the minimum.

The judges said the commerce commission did not give sufficient consideration to the element of reproduction costs and that the phone company should receive a return on a minimum of $125,000,000 on that basis alone.

Estimate Revenue Rates.

The court estimated the reduction would cost the company $1,700,000 in the year 1923, leaving only $6,740,000 as revenue for returns, or less than 5½ per cent, which the court held to be clearly confiscatory. On another basis the court estimated the return at less than 4½ per cent. The concluding words of the opinion were:

"Considering the attitude of the defendant [commerce commission and city] as to the trial of the case and the effect of a decree for the defendant, a court of equity will scrutinize this record with great care before making an order which will require the plaintiff to refund more than $11,000,000.

Case "Not Doubtful One."

"The case, however, does not appear to be a doubtful one, even on assumptions as favorable to the defense as it is reasonably possible to make, and the temporary injunction is made permanent."

After receiving the opinion Attorneys Goldstein and Haight conferred with Corporation Counsel Samuel A. Ettelson and then said they had not decided whether the next move would be a motion for a rehearing or a direct appeal to the United States Supreme court.

COMMISSION ORDERS PHONE RATE BOOSTS FOR NEW YORK CUT

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Just thirteen hours before the new rates of the New York Telephone company were to become effective, the public service commission today promulgated its own rates, adopting the schedule of the company, but directing a 20 per cent reduction in every increase over the old figures.

The average increase in residence telephones in New York City annually under the company rate would be $3.42, and under the commission rate $2.74.

The average increase in business telephones in the city would be $7.32 annually under the company rate and $5.86 under the commission rate.

TUG AND CREW OF 14 SINK IN GULF OF MEXICO

Beaumont, Tex., Jan. 31.—(AP)—A radio message tonight from the Standard Oil tanker Liebre, bound for Beaumont, said the tugboat Edgar F. Coney sank in the Gulf of Mexico with the loss of the crew of 14. The message was received by M. T. Ball, president of the Sabine Towing company, at Port Arthur, owners of the Edgar F. Coney.

The tug sailed from Port Arthur with a barge in tow for Mobile Tuesday morning. She was overdue at Mobile 24 hours when the message was received that the barge was found afloat. The tanker reported that the master of the barge had hoisted a distress signal and gave the information when rescued that the tug and its crew had gone down.

The entire personnel of the crew was not known at the towing company headquarters. Four of the men were reporetd to be William Brennen, master; O. G. Pyle, chief engineer; O. R. Kenney, first mate, and R. Durio, steward, all having families in Port Arthur.

PHONE ENGINEER SEES DECLINE OF BUSINESS LETTER

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Telephone service will be so economical and well perfected in ten years that business letters will no longer be written, Sergius P. Grace, vice president of Bell Telephone Laboratories, told the fourth University of Michigan engineering conference today at its closing session.

He then proceeded to show the progress which recently has been made.

He spoke a sentence into a telephone transmitter which, by means of amplifiers, was heard distinctly by his entire audience. At the same time a part of the electrical current from the amplifiers, representing this sentence, was stored in a "delay" circuit. After a delay of four seconds, this electrical current was transformed into a high voltage and passed directly into Grace's body.

Grace then placed his finger to the ear of Professor Wilson of the engineering school, and Wilson heard the words directly within his brain.

Gov. Fred W. Green of Michigan and Gov. Frank C. Emerson of Wyoming, both alumni of the University of Michigan, as is Mr. Grace, also appeared on the program.

"5 and 10" Law Applied in Canal Zone; Soldier Jailed

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BALBOA, Canal Zone, Jan. 31.—District Judge Lenihan today decided the Jones "five and ten" law applies to the Canal Zone, and Harry Clay Dearwester, a 22 year old soldier, was committed to Gamboa penitentiary for one month and fined $200. Dearwester had about a fifth of a pint of liquor when the police discovered him sleeping on the steps of the administration building in Balboa. His home is in Bellefontaine, O.

PASTOR WHO SHOT JANITOR, WIFE CAN'T GIVE BOND

Held on Charge of Attempted Murder.

Ottawa, Ill., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—The Rev. James A. Wilson, Mendota Methodist minister, who Wednesday shot the janitor of his church and the latter's wife in an effort to obtain possession of a letter which he believed would halt gossip about himself and a pretty widow, is in La Salle county jail under guard, unable to furnish $30,000 bond. The pastor will be prosecuted on an attempted murder charge in connection with his shooting of Amos Elliot, the church janitor, and Mrs. Elliott. After shooting the Elliots Mr. Wilson attempted suicide.

Russell O. Hanson, La Salle county prosecutor, said that Elliot was in a serious condition and that Mrs. Elliot had a relapse last night.

The Rev. Mr. Wilson and Mrs. John Wagner, to whom he wrote the letter which resulted in the shooting, became acquainted two years ago at the funeral of the woman's husband. Mrs. Wagner says he visited her after this and that his attentions were unwelcome. The affair reached a climax in December, Mrs. Wagner said, when his advances were repulsed. He chided her about a man boarder in her home, and later wrote her a letter of apology, which he declares caused the gossip. Mrs. Wagner gave the letter to Elliot, who, the pastor contends, told others of its contents.

FEBRUARY 28 FRIDAY

CLERGY, LAITY BOW AT BIER OF BISHOP ANDERSON

Funeral Rites for Primate Will Be Today.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

The funeral of the Most Rev. Charles Palmerston Anderson, primate of the American Episcopal church and bishop of Chicago, will take place this morning at 10:30 o'clock at St. James cathedral, Cass and Huron streets. Yesterday morning at 11 one of the church's offices was read at Bishop Anderson's home, 4512 Drexel boulevard, by the Rev. Dr. George H. Thomas, rector of St. Paul's church, Kenwood, before the removal of the body to St. James cathedral, where it lay in state until 9 o'clock last night.

Bishop Anderson will be buried beneath a simple altar in the chapel which is being erected to his memory at the Western Theological seminary in Evanston. Temporary interment will be made at Roseland cemetery until Feb. 24, the 30th anniversary of Bishop Anderson's elevation to the episcopate, when the committal of the body to its final resting place will be made.

Throngs Pay Tribute.

All yesterday throngs passed through St. James cathedral to pay silent but personal tribute to the memory of the dead prelate. Little children came to pay their respects to one who was known for his love for children. Rich and poor of varying creeds, nationalities, and races passed by the bier.

On either side of the casket which rested in the chancel of the cathedral were three large candles which shed a soft light. At the head and foot stood vested priests of the diocese. They represented the clergy who had served under Bishop Anderson in life. Every two hours during the day and night the priestly guard will be changed until the burial office is read and the solemn requiem is said by Suffragan Bishop Griswold at 10:30 this morning.

Will Hold Communion Service.

At 8 o'clock this morning, holy communion will be celebrated in the cathedral by the Very Rev. Duncan H. Browne. This service of communion is planned for members of the diocese.

Funeral plans were complete last night. There will no eulogy. The Rt. Rev. Hugh Latimer Burleson, bishop of South Dakota, and assistant to the presiding bishop of the church, will read the sentences of the burial office, and Dr. George H. Thomas will read the scripture lesson. At the eucharist following the burial office, Bishop Griswold will be the celebrant, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Edwin J. Randall, executive secretary of the diocese and the Rev. G. G. Moore, secretary of the convention of the diocese. Dean Duncan H. Browne will be the epistoler and Dean J. Herbert Edwards of Lake Forest, will be the gospeller.

Pall Bearers Are Selected.

Active pall bearers will be clergy whom Bishop Anderson ordained. They are, the Rev. Messrs. Edward S. White, Charles L. Street, William Simms, Walter C. Bihler, Hugh Mac Whorter, John Scambler, Norman B. Quigg, and W. B. Stoskopf. Honorary clerical pall bearers are, the Rev. Messrs. George Craig Stewart, E. A. Gerhard, Arthur Rogers, John R. Pickels, Howard R. Brinker, T. DeWitt Tanner, Frederick C. Grant, David E. Gibson, and H. L. Cawthorne. Honorary lay pall bearers include Edward L. Ryerson, L. E. Frankenthal Sr., E. J. Rogerson, B. I. Budd, J. D. Allen, F. Floyd Clinch, W. R. Townley, Angus S. Hibbard, Charles S. Kingman, H. Lawrence Choate, F. J. C. Borwell, J. V. Norcross, C. H. Roque, Dr. L. L. Gregory, L. B. Franklin, Henry Mason, Arthur Dole, W. L. Calkins, Henry E. Bullock, and C. Ward Seabury.

Hundreds of messages of condolence have been coming from all parts of the country from leaders of the Episcopal church as well as of other communions. Dr. Cleland B. McAfee, moderator of the Presbyterian general assembly declared that Bishop Anderson's death "is a great loss to us all!"

Judge Jesse Holdom declared that Bishop Anderson was the greatest personality in the Episcopal church in the last 100 years, while Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes of the Chicago area of the Methodist Episcopal church stated that he placed himself distinctly among those who mourn Bishop Anderson's death.

Praised for Peace Efforts.

Attorney Salmon Levinson paid high tribute to Bishop Anderson's interest in world peace and declared that the late primate was an outstanding spiritual leader on behalf of that movement, while leaders of the Greek Orthodox church spoke of the sympathy of their communion. It is expected that a score of bishops from central west dioceses will attend the services today.

An invitation has been extended to the house of bishops of the Episcopal church to meet in Chicago to elect a presiding bishop to succeed Bishop Anderson. The invitation was telegraphed to the Rt. Rev. A. W. Leonard, bishop of Ohio, senior bishop of the church. While Bishop Anderson had written his official request for the election of a coadjutor bishop for Chicago, the responsibility now falls upon the convention meeting next Tuesday to elect a diocesan bishop.

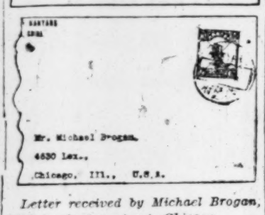
Whether the convention of the diocese which is to meet next Tuesday should proceed to such an election is questioned by various clergymen. Suggestions have been made that the convention should adjourn for a period before electing a successor to Bishop Anderson. Thus far, however, the general feeling of the clergy seems to confirm the opinion of the standing committee of the diocese as well as that of Bishop Griswold, who is the acting "ecclesiastical authority," that the convention should not delay the election.

THE TRIBUNE CONTEST OF INTERESTING LETTERS

Every morning The Tribune prints a photograph of the stamp and postmark and the name and address of the recipient of a letter from an interesting or little known place, with a map showing its origin and a brief word of description.

If you have received a letter from an interesting or little known place send the envelope to The Tribune. The sender of every envelope which is reproduced will be paid one dollar.

From Hanyang, China



Letter received by Michael Brogan, 4630 Lexington street, Chicago.

Hanyang is located at the confluence of the great Yangtze river and the Han in the province of Hupeh, 600 miles from the sea. It is the great iron and steel center of central southern China, being supplied with ore from the mines of Tayeh, 60 miles distant. These deposits are among the richest in the world and are estimated to have an ore reserve of thirty-five million tons.

The three cities at the junction of the Yangtze and the Han form the greatest metropolitan area in China. They are Hankow, the upper Yangtze treaty port, Wu Chang, the capital of Hupeh province and Hanyang, the manufacturing and industrial district. The Chinese maritime customs give their population for 1927 as 1,583,900. Shanghai with 1,500,000 and Peiping (Peking) with 1,297,718 come next. The province of Hupeh has a population of upwards of 27,000,000.

Ocean ships reach the wharves of the three cities, the treaty powers patrolling the Yangtze with gunboats as a protection to commerce against the warring Chinese factions and river pirates.

The industrial workers of Hanyang have made Hankow the center of the communists force in southern China. At present they are going along with the Kuomintang or Nationalist party under the leadership of Chiang Kai-shek at Nanking in trying to bring the northern provinces into a united republic of China.

AUTHORS DIFFER ON WHERE U. S. HISTORY STARTS

But Contest Entries Make Own Choice.

Does American history begin with George Washington or Christopher Columbus? Which of the two was the greater, or is deserving of the longer mention in the record of this country's development?

It is interesting to note from the entries already submitted in THE TRIBUNE'S 500 word American history contest that in a large percentage of the cases the authors have ignored Columbus and his discoveries and have started their accounts with the time of Washington and the revolutionary war. That is their privilege if they wish to exercise it.

Contestants Choose Material.

No restrictions as to style or content, it has been emphasized previously, are laid on the contestants who are vieing for the first prize of $1,000, to be paid for the best history of America sent to the history editor before Feb. 15. The contestants may include or exclude what they will in presenting the story of this nation. It remains to be seen which composition will appeal most to the judges.

THE TRIBUNE conceived the idea of holding such a competition after the announcement that former President Coolidge, noted for his economy of words in writing and speaking, had consented to pen a 500 word history of this country, to be carved on the side of the Mount Rushmore memorial in South Dakota.

Offer Nine Other Prizes.

Nine other prizes, totaling $1,100, are offered in addition to the grand prize. These constitute a second prize of $500, third prize of $250, and seven prizes of $50 each. Any one is eligible for the contest except employes of this newspaper and their families. One competitor may submit as many forms as he wishes.

Columbus and Washington are not the only immortals in American history the measure of whose greatness seems to vary with every individual. In utilizing their scant allotment of 500 words many have eliminated mention of both these historical characters, yet spend a comparatively large amount of space on Lincoln. Benjamin Franklin, statesman, philosopher, inventor, scientist, editor, and printer, has thus far rated only an infinitesimal percentage on the mentions he has received, even in papers which take cognizance of the present importance of Henry Ford.

You have until midnight of Feb. 15 to submit your entry.

MEDAL AWARDED NEGRO WHO SAVED TWO WHITE GIRLS

Sioux City, Ia., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—David W. Tapley, 45 years old, a Negro, was awarded a gold badge and proclaimed Sioux City's greatest hero of 1929. The award was made by the Columbia club, a Knights of Columbus organization. Tapley, packing house worker now living in St. Paul, lived in a shack on the river front south of Sioux City last summer. One night he heard cries of two young women for help. He went to their assistance and found them about to be criminally assaulted by two white men. In a fight that followed one of the white men was stabbed to death, but the girls were not harmed further, and Tapley was exonerated.

BOOKS

Sir T. Beecham Writes About Living, Music

As to Both of Which He Is an Expert.

BY FRANK SWINNERTON.

LONDON. — [Special Correspondence.]—A particularly interesting book of reminiscences and autobiographical notes is promised us. This is to be written by Sir Thomas Beecham, celebrated impresario and conductor. Unlike most musicians, Sir Thomas is a brilliant writer. He is a wit; he has a Shavian habit of turning everything topsy-turvy to suit his own argument; he has had an interesting and eventful life, and he is a great man.

SIR THOMAS BEECHAM.

Accordingly, his book is one that will certainly have a breath-taking verve and candor. To see Sir Thomas conducting is an exciting experience; to hear the music which he conducts so spiritedly is to hear it afresh, as if it had been charged with new significance.

I have great expectations of this book. It must have been written in the intervals of Sir Thomas' strenuous campaign for the establishment of permanent opera in England. Exactly what that campaign must have cost Sir Thomas in energy, I cannot calculate, but there will be opera this year in London as a result, and as we are also to have the reminiscences, it is probable that this extraordinary man will add considerably to the liveliness of the British isles during the next few months.

A novel which I think should please the curious in the course of the present season is that written by Miss Barbara Noble under the title "Years that Steal Our Youth Away." This is an interesting, if unequal, book, with delightful unexpected turns of insight and originality. It pictures an English middle class family and in particular the younger members of it with great freshness, and its theme, which is the noble, good, and protective love existing between the heroine and a crippled cousin older than herself—a love which persists after the death of this cousin—is handled with much delicacy.

The book is not "modern" in its morals, but it is modern in the best sense, for it is clear-sighted and candid. It is also a truer picture of middle class English life than most of the books I read. For this reason, among others, it will be among the most striking of the novels to appear this year under names unfamiliar to the English public.

I hear that Countess Russell, who is loved by many thousands of people who know her as "Elisabeth," the author of "Vera," "The Enchanted April," and a host of other delightful novels, is to spend the winter in the south of France.

Arnold Bennett, as soon as he has finished the long novel upon which he is now engaged, plans a trip to North Africa.

Here's Good Reading for Layman and for the Physician

"Medical Leaders," by Samuel W. Lambert, M. D., and George M. Goodwin, M. D. [Bobbs-Merrill], is a sort of "story of medicine" or "outline of medical mystery," or whatever you care to call it. It is a pleasantly written history of medical science as exemplified in the outstanding medical men of their times. It also is a history of man's ignorance and his gullibility and his struggles to adjust himself to his world, not only physically but mentally.

For it is a far cry from the layman's acceptance of the barber-surgeons who doubled in the use of sharpnesses, practices as well as razors, to the layman's acceptance of anything so invisible, so intangible and so mysterious as the X-ray for instance. The quacks appear—amusingly—as well as the heroes of science.

Views the American Scene, with Eye on Stock Tickers

"Prosperity, Fact or Myth," by Stuart Chase [the fourth selection of Paper Books] is a survey of our present prosperity. Mr. Chase completed the book before the October crash in Wall street. The introduction, written after the crash, deals specifically with the nation's prosperity in relation to the Wall street situation. His predictions, however, in the body of the book regarding soaring stock values were so unerring that his only revisions were to change from the future to the past tense. The book considers our present prosperity's influence upon the basic modes of American living and in the organization of industry.

Fanny Butcher Tells of Quiet Gotham Sunday

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

NEW YORK.—A nice quiet Sunday in the big city, perhaps taking a walk in Wall street (than which there is no more peacefully deserted spot in the world), leisurely reading those potentially thrilling life stories that are printed on the tombstones in Trinity churchyard—it looked, in prospect like a perfect, restful afternoon.

Was it? Judge for yourself. First a tea at Grace Hickox's. She used to live in Chicago—you remember her—everybody does. She is married and lives in one of those enormously high celled houses in the thirties that make you feel like Mrs. Dalloway. Taken there by Theresa Garrett Elliot, whose husband, Henry, is the elder brother of T. S. Eliot.

Just time to talk a minute with a young Frenchman who is over here writing for Paris magazines and papers, whose pseudonym is Leumas, but who looks more as if his real name is Samuels. Then a dash to the Irvin Cobbs'. There everybody and his wife (or somebody else's) was eating the famous Cobb fare and drinking the famous Cobb applejack. Fannie Hurst was just leaving with a dog on her arm, one of the "pekingeses of the Ritz" (whom we met later accidentally).

Witter Bynner, asking me if I lived in New York, because every time he came to town I was there. Hewitt Howland, editor of the Century magazine, introducing me to a gentleman who is evidently the fox hound czar of America; when he found he raised every kind of dog but mine—the Scotch terrier—I ducked him and watched the lady scion of one of the Boston royal families operate on Will Beebe.

Her line was to tell every man who was presented to her that he reminded her of her last lover. Will Beebe seemed interested, but not convinced, when I barged in with a breezy middle western hello. After a reunion I was urged to attend an impromptu party he had decided on having, to celebrate two important events in the family, the finishing of his wife's novel—she's Elswyth Thane—and the fact that he had just got money for his next expedition.

Hewitt Howland's cute little wife, Manie, who is a good 5 feet, did her duty as the sister of the hog, who has shrunk amazingly since the last time we saw him. Irvin Cobb is outsize now only in the tum. The stage, litrachoor, the arts, the world as present, all talking at once. Being social is certainly a strain on the eardrums. From there I was taken to the house of Maxwell Aley to meet Julia Peterkin, who, let me state right here and now, is my idea of a perfectly grand person. She has the most delightful sense of humor, is as simple as a sunrise, and as thrilling. Whenever she opens her mouth she says something.

She was talking about some photographs that Doris Ullman took of her. "I looked," she said, "just like a faithful setter who looks up at you and says 'be kind to my puppies.' It will be a wonderful picture to send out to literary editors. They will never dare strike at a face like that."

She was all done in white velvet, dress, hat, impressive you couldn't help calling her as to looks, with red hair topping her almost 6 feet of height. She is coming (I always forget that I am in other parts) she is going to Chicago in March.

Harvey Ferguson was there, talking about living in Chicago some winter. Robert Nathan, who thinks I am the world's worst critic re his output, although I think I am one of his most outspoken admirers, liked my French dress and my velvet beret with a nose veil over my eyes (the old harem idea dies hard even in a modern world). He hadn't the slightest notion who the person in the disguise of a lady of fashion might be.

It wrecked one of his favorite illusions to find, after ten minutes, that his favorite literary enemy didn't wear brogans and curse.

We loped over to Will Beebe's studio. There he showed us some fascinating pictures of the fauna of the sea [if you can call fish that], and invited me to see Bermuda. Elswyth Thane showed movies of the island, and a charming woman, named Mary Hammond, and her very young son, David, who has just published his first novel.

There, also, were Martha Ostenso, who looks and acts shyer than you would believe possible to be; assorted comers and goers all offering different suggestions about how I had better doctor my cold, Fannie Hurst, in a very long dress, leaving just as I did. I mentioned seeing her, as I went into the Cobbs', with a dog looking like a boutonniere on her coat. That led to my being taken next door to meet him. A vast Italianesque room, with Fannie Hurst fitting perfectly into it. Therein was the smallest dog person in the world. A toy pekingese, guarded by a normal sized "peke," which she called her St. Bernard. By that time my cold had conquered my spirit and instead of making the two hounds friends for life, my normal method of spending a literary hour, when dogs are around, I dragged myself away. At enough after midnight to make the morning seem far too near, my cold and I snapped off the light and counted seven lights in the Ritz tower shining in the distance. And thus ended a nice simple, quiet Sunday. Being literary in New York is a life work in itself.

Hunting Field, Privateering in Books for Young

BY AGATHA L. SHEA.

"The Other Crowd," by Mabel A. Pierce. [Harcourt-Brace.]

"Pirates' Port," by Alida S. Malkus. [Harpers.]

"Social Science Readers," by Helen S. Read. [Scribners.]

For the boy who likes to find a variety of interests in his reading and who is somewhat tired of mystery and adventure, A. Henry Higginson's "Letters from an Old Sportsman to a Young One" may prove just the something different he is craving. Written as a series of letters from an experienced sportsman to a young, prospective one, it is an entertaining recital of the joys and trials of the sportsman's life.

Even the average city boy who has little prospect of becoming a devotee of either hunting or riding will find it interesting. It begins with instruction of the little boy who has his first pony, and concludes with the young man who has his own stable, and is beginning his actual career as a sportsman. Although a few references are made to English hunting practices, emphasis is placed on the sport in America, and information on hunting dress, etiquette, and horses is given in an informal, chatty manner that makes delightful reading.

Among other new books for this age (14-16) also should be mentioned Mabel A. Pierce's "The Other Crowd" and Alida Sinis Malkus' "Pirates' Port." The former is a story of two groups of modern young people vacationing at a Maine summer resort, one of which is addicted to the fast, gay life of society, and the other to the wholesome simple outdoor sports of the country. The story is woven around the advent of a popular newcomer into the region and her efforts to fuse the two groups into one, an attempt which is only partially successful.

Her own character and ideals are finally put to the test when she is obliged to choose between "the gang" and "the other crowd." It is a light, amusing story of modern young life, of its frivolities and foolishness, but not forgetting its basic commonsense which somehow survives through all.

"Pirates' Port" is a story of privateering on the Hudson, and of early days in New York. The story deals with the dashing young English captain, Lovelace, and his adventures in many ports with the mysterious "Golden Hart." There is a love story and the girls will like it as well as the boys. It is, however, a little slow moving, and the recurrence of Dutch terms and Dutch names makes the reading somewhat difficult at times. One doubts that it will be as popular as that fine story of Pueblo life, "The Dragon Fly of Zuni," which this author gave us last year.

For the younger readers (6-9), one should note the new titles in the Social Science readers which offer fine material for home or school reading. This series now comprises some eight titles, all telling the stories of familiar people and their everyday doings. They are very pleasing, informational readers of the new type, attractively illustrated in colors. The new titles, "Mr. Brown's Grocery Store," "Mary and the Policeman," "Jip and the Fireman," and "Billy's Letter" are suggestive of the types of subjects treated. Parents and others looking for attractive, inexpensive reading matter for little children will do well to examine these books before purchasing the ordinary, cheap picture book.

SARAH SALT AND MAURICE DE KOBRA NEW YORK LIONS

BY ALTA MAY COLEMAN.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Some two hundred American literati danced in honor of the English Sarah Salt and the French Maurice Dekobra at the very swank, tres chic five-to-seven tea for which Brewer and Warren preempted the Savoy Plaza on Wednesday.

Miss Salt's only typical heritage from the British Isles is the crisp lilt of her voice. She was the center of the huddle in which were Lola Ridge, Carl Van Vechten, Muriel Draper and Herbert Gorman. She is slender, petite, young; raven's wing hair and eyelashes; black, black eyes—quick, expressive, intellectual eyes, belying her smile made ingenuous by wide-set "little girl" teeth.

When Joseph Brewer made gangway for himself, tea, punch and cigarets—the stage is lacking one of its greatest jugglers because he turned publisher—we edged in after him and snatched a word.

Miss Salt corroborates Hugh Walpole's recent statement that "the English, in externals, copy the Americans but aren't in the least influenced by them." As to our novelists, Miss Salt pinned the laurel—or is it more in keeping with a lady who wears 'em to say the green orchids—on Dreiser's "Tragedy."

Sinclair Lewis is awarded the carnation boutonniere by Maurice Dekobra, who has visited New York six times ere this. He speaks English only with the Frenchman's inimitable flutter of the "r's." Tall, spare, gray tinged at the temples, he has the erectness of the military, having served in the army in Africa. His next novel is to have that setting. And the next after that may be written in English—an interesting experiment because, "one says in French what cannot be expressed in English—and vice versa."

On Friday—which, by the way, was Beaux-Arts ball night—Bennett Cerf and Donald Klopfer turned their attention from the publishing of books at Random house to the jovial matter of staging a "so-called tea or inspirational orgy for the spiritual benefit of Rockwell Kent."

That explains why Lee Simonson, Fruh, Heyward Broun, George Gershwin, Edith Fitzgerald, Peter Finley Dunne Jr., Pete Howe, Manuel Komroff, Irita Van Doren, Burton Rascoe, and several hundred more well known Manhattanites passed up the costume affair for the rollicking barn dance fun of frankfurters sizzling hot from the grill, etc., etc., etc.

Bright Murders, Better Killers, Authors' Idea

"The Poisoned Chocolates Case" Good Example.

"The Crimson Circle," by Edgar Wallace (Crime Club).

"Triple Murder," by Carolyn Wells (Lippincott).

Murders are growing more and more subtle—at least, in books. In these up-to-date times when killing a man is a work of art, undertaken by a skillful craftsman and appreciated by connoisseur readers, a book is considered a flop unless it exercises your mind as well as your emotions; unless it also makes you laugh; unless it holds you taut till the last page; unless it makes you think every one from Benny, aged 2, to the dowager duchess, aged 102, is guilty of the crime.

One of the cleverest, smartest little murders of 1929 is that called "The Poisoned Chocolates Case," by Anthony Berkeley. Here is not only a most intriguing plot, but a delightful piece of characterization. And the ending—well, it's an achievement. Only one in a thousand like it!

"The Poisoned Chocolates Case" and Mr. Wallace's "The Crimson Circle" are Crime club publications. In the latter you have a cheerful little situation created by an arch fiend who, like an octopus, reaches out in all directions and seizes his prey in a relentless grasp. The tentacles of the octopus are human beings, tools of the fiend, each unknown to the other, and all moved by his mind. None has seen him, but all have heard his voice. It's a unique and ghastly state of affairs. Best read this book in the broad daylight!

"The Dartmouth Murders," by Clifford Orr, is unusual in its plot, but in addition there is something else particularly allurin about the book. The naturalness of the college campus, which forms the background, lends an authentic tone to the thrilling tale.

"The Secret of 37 Hardy Street," by Robert Casey, is in itself a pretty good secret, but there are so many interruptions and ambushes in the form of detective discussions, doctors' discussions and various other hindrances at readers almost lose patience.

Strange things happen on Hardy street. One of its respected citizens is found dead before a table set for four people, a strange sign, indeed, and later on you find that the dead man was not as respected as he was supposed to be.

Carolyn Wells, who, like Mr. Wallace, is a veteran detective story writer, has added another murder to her list—or three, rather—with "Triple Murder." You may guess the instrument that caused the last death, as this reader did, but it is not so easy to guess the villain. Two or three persons seem equally suspicious. And this, of course, proves the book is up to the minute.

The splendor and glory of Mandalay in an exotic novel of the Far East....

THE LACQUER LADY

By F. TENNYSON JESSE

THIS story of Oriental splendors and barbaric intrigues in the court of Burma is already a smashing success in Great Britain, where it was selected by J. C. Squire, Hugh Walpole, Clemence Dane, Arnold Bennett and Sir James Barrie, and distributed to its members by the English Book Society. "This strange, gorgeous tale of old Mandalay is exceedingly enjoyable...an exciting period in a preposterously captivating city of the East."—London Daily Mail $2.50

LORD LANSDOWNE

A Biography by Lord Newton

LORD NEWTON'S charming biography of Lord Lansdowne is joy to the casual reader no less than the serious scholar. Any intelligent person will delight in the skill, the humor, and the sympathetic, but independent attitude with which one British aristocrat has drawn the portrait of another great personality."—Sidney B. "Surpasses Aristotle's Metaphysics and Kant's Critique of Pure Reason"

PROCESS AND REALITY

By Alfred North Whitehead
Author of Science and the Modern World

A VERY remarkable book. It witnesses anew to the vital achievement of the human intelligence of our period... S. Alexander's monumental Space, Time and Deity opened a decade; Whitehead's Process and Reality comes to close it. Perhaps the situation can best be made clear by saying bluntly that these two works surpass Aristotle's Metaphysics and Kant's Critique of Pure Reason for intrinsic importance." —New York Times $4.50

DISPARITY, NOT PARITY.

Although Mr. MacDonald has thrown out the suggestion that abolition of battleships be considered by the conference, it is not among the probabilities that such a drastic step will be taken, especially as our delegation is reported to be opposed to it. It is probable that a cessation of new building in this category will be agreed upon or at any rate some arrangement reached for reduction in size and weight of new ships. It is, therefore, not without interest to examine the status quo, which in America is generally supposed to be equality. In fact, the summary of the new British Blue Book published in English newspapers shows in figures a slight preponderance in the American fleet. That is, under battleships the figures are 16 for Great Britain and 18 for the United States.

These figures are delusive. In addition to the 16 battleships, the British have four battle cruisers, ships of most formidable fighting power, fit to take their place in line of battle with superdreadnaughts and expected to do so. In other words, ships of the capital ship category. But this is only the beginning of the story. The 20 capital ships of the British now include the new Nelson and Rodney, the most powerful war vessels in the world. These replaced four of the oldest battleships of the fleet of 22 capital ships agreed to at the Washington conference as against 18 for the United States. The net gain in fighting efficiency for the British capital fleet is substantial. On the other hand, of the 18 battleships allowed to us, four—the Florida, Utah, Wyoming, and Arkansas—are old and carry main batteries of 12 inch guns. They are really not ships of the first line. No capital ships of the British or Japanese fleet have guns of such small caliber, range and hitting power. The Florida and Utah were laid down in 1909. The oldest capital ships in the British fleet were laid down in 1912, a difference of three years in a period of rapid change and progress in naval construction. The Wyoming and Arkansas are almost as inferior to the oldest and least efficient of the British and Japanese capital ships as the Florida and Utah.

In other words, there is no parity between the British and American battle fleet, but a marked inferiority for us, an inferiority quite enough to be decisive in battle. In speed, range, hitting power the British capital ship fleet is not equal but substantially superior to ours, and this should be kept in mind, not only in considering the proposal for the maintenance of the status quo but also in connection with the haggling over the allotment of 10,000 ton eight inch cruisers. The British proposal has been 18 for the United States, 15 for Great Britain. The Americans have been holding out for 21, although our naval board has estimated that 33 are required under our conditions. The argument has been over a margin of three cruisers, an advantage which is materially outweighed by the discrepancy between the American and British battle fleets, so far as combat is concerned, and leaving out of consideration the overwhelming advantage of Great Britain in smaller cruisers, convertible fast liners, and in bases throughout the world.

We do not urge these facts as in themselves decisive in a broad consideration of Anglo-American naval relations, but they show that the representatives of British naval power are playing their hand for all it can be worth and not yielding an unnecessary inch. We have been told meanwhile from the highest sources that British policy does not envisage war with the United States or British building conditioned by that eventuality. Nevertheless, no disposition has been shown by British representatives to consent to any substantial reduction of the margin of superiority of Great Britain's naval power over ours. Since 1927 that margin has widened. We are weaker relatively to all the great naval powers than we were then, although our foreign commitments and overseas commerce, and therefore our responsibilities, have enormously increased. That is the rock-bottom basis for American negotiation for naval reduction and limitation at this conference.

LAW IN LAW ENFORCEMENT.

Dr. Doran, prohibition commissioner, has put out a new book of rules for his agents and has taken some pains to impress on them that they are not to break into homes without regard for legal procedure. The doctor concedes that the law of the land protects the sanctity of the home from invasion except in strict compliance with law. "The thought you should have in mind," the instructions read, "at all times in reference to search warrants is that the rights of the person against whom the warrant is directed are paramount to the success of the search. Do not unnecessarily resort to harsh means or tactics in the discharge of your duty in this regard."

This is downright handsome on the part of the government, but it cannot be regarded as voluntary or accepted as indicative of conviction. Lawlessness in law enforcement is not objectionable to dry government. The abuse of personal and property rights is a part of the procedure, partly with a color of legal sanction and partly without regard even for that.

Whenever a concession is made to constitutional guaranties it is forced by the opposition to Volsteadism and each regulation for obedience to the law in enforcing it will be regarded by the fanatical drys as a sign of weakness. The war cry is: "Never mind the law; treat 'em rough."

ELECTRIFICATION PAYS.

The Illinois Central, it is announced, received a gross revenue of more than $5,000,000 from its suburban service in 1929. In 1926 the corresponding figure was $3,450,000. That was the year when electric operation began.

An even more remarkable picture is presented by a comparison of net earnings after taxes. In 1926 there was only $103,000 left of the $3,450,000 for interest and dividends; in 1929 the earnings after taxes were $1,560,000. The gross had increased $1,550,000 and all of that increase, and a few thousand dollars in addition, was available for dividends and interest.

Electrification pays. The Illinois Central has only begun to reap the profit of its improvement. The communities which it serves are growing and will continue to grow because they enjoy excellent transportation. More people in these communities mean more business for the railroad.

Other railroads entering Chicago have the same opportunity to profit from their suburban services. If they will not undertake electrification for the good of Chicago, they ought to do it for the sake of their stockholders.

FASHION AND TASTE.

A photograph in last Sunday's TRIBUNE of the leading architects, artists, and sculptors of the World's Columbian exposition suggests some modest reflections on fashion. We have just had a sudden reversal of woman's styles from the very short skirt to the very long. That it was dictated by the producer rather than demanded by the consumer is, of course, understood, but, fruitful as an inquiry into that might be, we are at the moment more interested in the fact that the dictatorship of fashion is often so regardless of taste. We are not referring to the new women's styles, which in some cases or for some women are an esthetic improvement upon the shorter styles, but it is strikingly illustrated by the strange costumes of the Columbian fair builders. In their own professional work they created things of beauty, but they submitted to apparel that to our eyes today suggests only a low comedy makeup. The pot hats or derbies worn by all but two of the men could not have been devised by any one with a sense of beauty or even of comfort.

We hasten to admit that men's styles of today will look as funny to a later generation, but the point is that all fashions do not date in this way. There are periods in both men's and women's styles which are as attractive to one generation as to another. The men of the colonial or the revolutionary period wore clothes which do not look ugly or comic to us and never will. With the decline of aristocracy and the rise of the business man there was a deterioration in styles for men which is not likely to be corrected for a long time. Styles for women have not suffered in the same degree, for the decorative influence has been and always will be dominant. But there have been some very bad periods, the worst perhaps in all human history being the period of the bustle, an invention of some diabolical satirist determined to caricature the human form divine and defeat the eternal feminine by making it as grotesque as possible.

Beauty cannot be defined satisfactorily, but its inherent laws are not to be defied with impunity and when a fashion produces ugly lines and forms it will appear as ugly or ridiculous in due time. When it produces lines of grace, propriety and proportion, as it sometimes does, it will never offend at a later time, though it may cease to be practicable or appropriate to later conditions of life. The knight and the cavalier, the burgher, the medieval worker and housewife, the lady of the pillion and the sedan chair, the squire and the city gentleman, had fashions suitable to their conditions. The age of the counting room and the subway, the automobile and the airplane requires other fashions, but they may be appropriate and practical and still have a beauty which the future will approve and need not resort to the ugliness which as soon as the influence of fashion is withdrawn makes such devices as the bustle and the pot hat objects of ridicule and amazement to a generation which has discarded them.

[N. Y. Herald-Tribune.]

With the Motor Boat show only half over, officials believe that the exhibitors have already sold $1,500,000 worth of boats "over the counter" to retail purchasers, and they are seeing before them the outlines of an unparalleled prosperity. After all, as one of them points out, 70 per cent of the earth's surface is composed of water, and at the present rate of demand it would seem to be a fair measure of the ultimate possibilities of the industry. The spectator can only be astonished at the extent to which it has already been developed. The standardization methods of the automobile industry seem to have been taken over bodily, with their concomitants of lowered prices, national advertising and the tapping of an unsuspected demand. Perhaps this is not remarkable with the outboards—marine "flivvers"—but it is something of a shock to see large cruisers and motor yachts, costing many thousands of dollars, built to stock models, displayed like automobiles and finding purchasers.

The shellbacks will grumble a little at the mechanization of a noble sport which this seems to indicate. High-speed express runabouts made to look and to run as much like an automobile as possible or fine motor cruisers taking their inspiration more from Atlantic liners than from the days of sail are a long voyage from sailing craft; but they get people on the water, they get the virus of salt air and seamanship into the blood, and the yacht yards turning out sailing craft will probably testify that the motorboat has only added to their own business. Indeed, a natural development already seems to be on the way, through the medium of the one-design racing classes, toward a similar standardization, with a similar reduction in cost, for the sailboat. And sail will always hold the loyalties of those who can afford the time for it.

But whatever may have been done by standardization, boating remains a luxury, perhaps the most expensive of all luxuries except aviation. The fact that the show has uncovered the heaviest demand in its experience so soon after the unfortunate events of last October seems to be of national significance. The recent automobile show revealed the existence of a market much stronger than, in the prophetic gloom of the year's end, had been expected. One awaits the forthcoming aviation show with interest.

CUSTOMER LEAVES BAD CHECK.

Chicago, Jan. 29.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—What recourse, if any, have we with a customer who has issued us a check for payment of a bill, the check coming back "nonsufficient funds," and who consistently ignores our demands for payment, and refuses to make the check good? Almost three months has elapsed since the issuance of this check. Cannot we obtain a warrant for his arrest for issuing such a check? The bill is almost a year overdue. L. J. S.

1. Probably your only course is a civil suit, for which purpose you should employ an attorney. 2. Not if, as appears to be the case, the check was issued after the goods had been delivered.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

COLLECTING BACK SALARY.

Chicago, Jan. 29.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—When my husband stopped working for a firm in Michigan he was paid a part of his salary. There was a balance of eight hundred dollars. In what length of time can he collect balance? J. J. D.

Six years.

ENTIRE INTEREST INVALID.

Chicago, Jan. 28.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—A borrowed $400 at 8 per cent interest from B for one year. A has been four years repaying the note which was never renewed. Is A required to pay interest for longer than one year? R. B.

Under Illinois law, seven per cent is the maximum interest on an ordinary loan. Interest in excess of this maximum renders the whole interest invalid, so that the creditor can collect only the principal.

DIET OF THE INDIANS.

THE American Indian was not unhealthy before the white man handed him a new lot of diseases and a new bundle of habits. It is true that he did not multiply and inhabit the earth, but that was for other reasons. He had a high accident rate and a low birth rate, and he was without thrift.

An editorial in the Medical Record and Journal says that his fair average health may have been due in part to his diet. He lived largely on meats. These were cooked enough to kill any worms or bacteria they contained. However, since most of the meats were supplied by wild animals killed in the open, it is not likely that there was much infection or infestation.

He had no milk except mother's milk. Until the Spaniards came the Indian had no cows, horses, sheep, or goats, and in consequence he had no milk supply. He had no cane or beet sugar. He did have honey and in some sections he had maple sugar. These were highly prized foods. In summer the more stable Indians gathered wild grapes, plums, crabapples, and berries and preserved these by drying in the sun. Thus he got some fruit sugar. Mother's milk was a source of milk sugar for the babies. In spite of these sources the Indian diet was very low in sugars.

It was somewhat richer in other carbohydrates. The more stable Indians had corn and wild rice and some other grains. They raised squashes and some roots and tubers. In hard times they ate a good many barks, roots, and tenderer plants. Their only sources of fats were the fats of animals, nuts, grains, and seed. They got very little salt except that which was found in the meats. Rights to salt licks were the cause of more than one war.

War parties lived on nothing more than dried meats and dried grain. The Indians regarded well fed warriors as no account.

The claim that the Indian had a satisfactory diet cannot be defended. He had many diarrheal disorders. His babies did not thrive, partly because there was not much in between mother's milk and tree bark. But, on the other hand, the Indian did miss some of the nutritional disorders from which we suffer. The best diet lies somewhere between that of the Indian and that of white men of today.

OLD OPEN FIREPLACE.

I. F. H. writes: If you will pardon my constructive criticism, I have two facts for and one against the use of an open fireplace, about which you gave a short discussion recently.

No ultraviolet radiation of beneficial value is given off by a fireplace as ordinarily used. Such radiation could be emitted by burning certain substances, but that would hardly be practicable. Infra-red radiation is given off by a fire in a fireplace as ordinarily used, and if the subject in question is well protected from the drafts which you mentioned and which are most certainly present, a certain amount of good might result.

The worst feature, in my mind, about an open fireplace is the fact that unless provision is made to balance the moisture in the atmosphere the air becomes drier than the Sahara desert, a most unhealthful condition and productive of colds, etc. However, so far as this goes, the air in the ordinary house is far too dry and it is essential that provision be made to increase the relative humidity as the temperature goes up by artificial heating.

The chief benefit resulting from an open fireplace, in my mind, is the peaceful and restful condition which it produces upon the occupants of the house, for it aids materially in forgetting troubles and putting the mind to ease. Without question, anything which will do this is an aid to health, for worry has killed many.

An open fireplace, properly constructed, as I think mine has been, ought to produce but little dust, especially if it is offset enough, placed below the floor, and has sufficient draft. For example, almost any night if we go outside the house we smell sulphur readily, showing offhand that the amount of sulphur from burning coal exceeds 200 parts in a million, a most unhealthful condition. I think far greater trouble comes from inefficient smoke regulatory laws, for not only is the dust produced to directly affect health, but the smoke robs the solar and sky radiation of all ultraviolet radiation, down to at least 3,200 angstroms.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

NOW IT'S FEBRUARY—

and what of that? Just this: It means January's beat it, for one thing. Old January is the toughest winter month we've got. Don't you remember that long string of goose eggs we got in January? And the temperature was well down under 'em a good deal of the time. Of course February has got a few O's in its system, too, but not as many as January. But it can't have as many as January because it's only got twenty-eight days. That's a little comfort.

And old Feb. has got some good holidays—Lincoln's birthday on the 12th, Valentine's day on the 14th, and G. Washington's on the 22d. Valentine's day is quite a big day in Chicago—machine guns and everything. Remembering the massacre last St. Valentine's day, we're going to stay in our cellar this year and send valentines to ourself. Feb. is quite a month, if you look at it right. The days keep on getting longer and people see robins in their back yard. With a good glass you ought to see three or four. If you take a couple of glasses (if it's the hootch that's being sold around these parts right now) you will see several flocks of robins, four-legged robins, and robins with long tails like alligators and pink ears with green polka dots on 'em.

Yessir, old Feb. towards the end of his stay here is going to give you a few whiffs of spring. The chickadee will warble his little song that the sweet young days of spring, gentle spring, are almost here. Of course, the chickadee is a dirty little liar, but he means well. He wants to cheer us up. So, hooray, Feb., glad to see you back again.

EVANESCENCE.

Let us have bright and cheerful songs tonight,
Not sad old plaintive melodies which stir
Old buried passions of whose graves the white
Snows of forgetfulness have made a blur
Of unremembered loveliness like paths
Of meteors across a velvet sky,
Too many times have we immersed in baths
Of loneliness and sorrow . . . you and I.

Let us have singing . . . but of hope tonight,
Let Bacchus be conductor once again,
And may we conjure forth the old delight
Of those who go on singing in the rain;
Forgetting not, my friend, whate'er we sing,
All songs will soon be past remembering!

E. LESLIE SPAULDING.

SEN. BROOKHART of Iowah reads a letter in the senate saying that the fashionable Century club of New York serves real gin cocktails at its monthly dinner. Which sounds to us like a clever plan of the Century club to boost the membership.

BUT, TOUCHIN' ON and appertainin' to the Century club and its gin cocktails, it is said by all the newspapers that Mr. Hoover is a member of the said Century club. Which we don't think has anything to do with the matter. We know lots of clubs that Mr. Hoover doesn't belong to and never did, and they have gin cocktails, too. So, why bring that up?

LA LA LA LA LA LAH?

And now delegations are besieging congress with a new musical version of "The Star-Spangled Banner" which cuts out the high notes. The high notes never bothered us; we always stop short and let the sopranos attend to them. What fussed us and everybody around was remembering the words. When "The Star-Spangled Banner" is sung most of the people near us always render it this way:

La la la la la lah,
By the dawn's la la la,
What so dum a dum dum,
Tee a lum lum lum lum,
La la la la la la la
La la la la la.

Before we bobtail the music we ought to do something about the words. The way we sing it doesn't seem quite patriotic enough. Or something.

ALL OF OUR BEST gangster circles are terribly wrought up over one of their number telling a policeman who it was shot him. Our best gangster circles feel the same way about this that our society set does about wearing tan shoes with full evening dress or eating one's soup too noisily.

SNOWSHOE AL (still hunting for a job) is not being spoken to by Mrs. Snowshoe at present. At a merry dinner party the other night the guests were bragging about the various operations they had undergone and one lady narrated with great pride that she had been cut open by the docs four times to take her appendix out. "Why don't you have 'em fix a zipper on you?" asked Snowshoe. And now Mrs. Snowshoe won't speak to him and he's going all around trying to find out if he did wrong.

SMOKE SCREEN.

Oh, God is good to let us wear
A mask once in awhile!
Though hearts are heavy bowed with care
The eyes and lips can smile.

Our tongue can speak of trifling things
Though souls be wrapped in woe
We need not show the world the stings
That pierce and pain us so.

Oh, God is good to let us wear
This every day disguise—
To hide our anguish and despair
From curious, prying eyes.

MARJORIE F. W.

LAGNIAPPE.

MR. HOOVER told the American delegates to the London peace show that they must not drink wines and so on at the dinners they attend. If we have to be told about table manners we would rather some one told us which fork to use for the fish. That's the thing that always bothers us.

NEWS MUST have been scarce yesterday. All the newspapers first-paged the story about the oyster in the shell down at Hammond, Ind., which bit the hand of the chief of police while he was feeding the little animal. The trouble is that away out here in the middle west we don't understand oysters. They should never be approached suddenly, as they are very nervous and easily alarmed. Always walk straight up to an oyster in a gentle and kindly manner and tickle him under the chin. Then sing softly, "Put Me in My Oyster Bed." Then attach the leash to his collar and lead him around the block.

THE TAILORS' CONVENTION in Chicago says the well dressed man in 1930 will require fifteen suits. Which we think is the acme, the zenith, the top notch, the last word, and a few more things like that in optimism. R. H. L.

IT DOESN'T SEEM TO MATTER HOW BIG THE BULLY IS, THERE'S ALWAYS SOME ONE TO CALL HIS BLUFF

65 YEARS AGO TODAY

FEBRUARY 1, 1865.

WASHINGTON.—An announcement in the dispatches some weeks ago that Tammany Hall was bringing its influence to bear on the passage of the constitutional amendment prohibiting slavery and that its success was therefore assured received full verification in the house. The amendment was passed by a vote of 119 to 56. The final announcement of the vote was a signal for a whirlwind of applause wholly unprecedented in congressional annals, with the galleries giving cheer after cheer and members on the floor shouting and throwing up their hats.

NEW YORK.—Rebel peace commissioners are on their way to Washington. Hon. Alexander H. Stephens, ex-Senator Hunter of Virginia, and Mr. Campbell arrived at Gen. Grant's headquarters and requested permission to come to Washington. They did not claim to come from Jeff Davis in an official capacity, but desired simply to visit the capital to talk matters over. It is expected they will be in Washington within the next 36 hours.

FRANKFORT, Ky.—William Goebel, Democrat, who is lying at the point of death in the Capitol hotel from an assassin's bullet, was propped up by pillows and while so weak he was scarcely able to hold up his right hand was sworn in as governor of Kentucky. After the ceremony he fell back exhausted and scarcely heard the words which the Democrats claim make him governor of Kentucky. J. C. W. Beckham was sworn in as lieutenant governor. The action followed a secret meeting of seventy-seven members of the legislature after racing and dodging troops called out by William S. Taylor, Republican, who had been duly inaugurated governor. The legislators approved the report of the contest committee and immediately the oath was administered to Goebel. After he recovered somewhat from his weakness he issued an order to the militia to disperse and named J. B. Castleman of Louisville new adjutant general. Gov. Taylor sent out patrols of soldiers to arrest all the legislators who attended the inauguration.

CRIMINAL INSANE ASYLUM

BY EDWARD H. OCHSNER, M.D.

It was with a great deal of interest that I read your editorial, "Hospital Prisons," because it is a problem of great importance to every citizen. The question as to how society should deal with the mental and moral defectives is one which has been the subject of much study and discussion. In this state this study and discussion crystallized itself in 1915 in the passage of a bill for the legal commitment and permanent segregation of certain classes of feeble-minded persons.

This commitment act is a combination of the lunacy act and the Juvenile court act, so adapted as to fit the feeble-minded situation. In order that a person may be legally committed he must be mentally defective from birth and he must, for want of proper supervision, control, care, and support, or other causes, be dangerous to himself or a menace to the community. This bill was passed by the Forty-ninth general assembly and became a law in July, 1915. I believe this still is the best law dealing with this particular problem of any state or nation, and if properly applied would do more to reduce crime, pauperism, and insanity than could be hoped for from the enforcement of any other single legal provision.

However, about the time this law was passed we were on the verge of war and as a consequence suitable provisions for its proper application have never been completed; and that is the chief reason why the deplorable conditions you outlined in your editorial above referred to as existing at Dixon have developed. While conditions at Dixon are probably worse than any other place in the state, similar conditions exist at Lincoln and St. Charles. I sincerely hope that your paper will start a thorough investigation of these conditions in order that the citizenry of the state may be thoroughly informed as to what the actual facts are and that suitable provision may be made by the next legislature to correct these evils.

The present difficulty is that the state has not made suitable provision for the housing and detention of those mentally and morally defective individuals who are committed by the courts and who should be permanently segregated for their own good and the good of society. The institutions at Lincoln and Dixon are suited only for the care and instruction of the tractable, nondelinquent feebleminded of the state and should be devoted exclusively to the care of this class of cases, and the state should establish a suitable institution for those mentally and morally defective individuals who, because of their criminal tendencies, cannot be properly taken care of at the other institutions. It should be located within thirty miles of Chicago and would necessarily have to be equipped so that escape of the committed individual would be impossible. The menace to the rural communities surrounding Dixon and St. Charles the state should no longer permit, and it is a surprise that those communities have permitted it to continue without more serious protest. There is an even more serious side to this problem, and that is its relation to the general problem of criminality.

Criminal law enforcement has two main objects, the protection of the lives and property of the honest, industrious citizen and the reformation, so far as this is possible, of the anti-social members of society who have committed some wrong against an individual or been guilty of some offense against society.

In dealing with the congenitally mental defectives who are a menace to society the law is based on the well established and quite generally accepted theory that very few of these persons can ever be sufficiently relieved of their mental handicap to become self-supporting citizens and hence it provides for their permanent segregation in suitable institutions.

The average mentally defective individual if sent to one of these institutions at a fairly early age is tractable, easily managed, and can be taken care of at a relatively small per capita cost to the state. The above statement holds good only if he has not been or is not being exposed to evil influence and bad associates. One of the most serious defects in our present handling of the situation is the fact that hardened criminals are being sentenced to Dixon in considerable numbers, and these naturally have a very bad influence on the noncriminal portion of the institution's population. While the state should do all it can to reform individuals, it is much more important to prevent others from acquiring criminal tendencies and habits. The state is not doing all it could do or should do in this regard; in fact, it is to a certain extent doing exactly the opposite by fostering the development of criminality in these mental defectives by compelling them to associate with individuals with strong criminal tendencies.

I am informed that at the St. Charles School for Boys the same deplorable condition exists; that to this institution, too, hardened juvenile criminals are constantly being committed; and that this institution, so ideally conceived as a place where juvenile delinquents should be reclaimed and reformed, is subjected to these bad influences; and some thinking people are wondering whether it is not surely degenerating into a high school for making criminals instead of being used as a training school for useful citizenship. I am not in any way criticizing the executive officials of the two state institutions, Dixon and St. Charles. They are making the best of a deplorable situation. My hope is to help arouse the citizens of the state to the seriousness of the situation, to arouse public opinion to the point where it will prevail upon the legislature to establish a suitable institution for the detention of the criminally inclined mental and moral defectives for whose incarceration no suitable facilities have thus far been provided.

I do not agree with those who maintain that further study of the problem is necessary before an attempt at a practical solution is undertaken. Much time, energy, and money have been spent in making a diagnosis as to what is wrong and in determining the line of treatment which should be instituted. Let us apply the treatment which we have every reason to believe will be effective.

Again, I do not agree with those who insist that new laws are necessary in order to accomplish the desired result. I believe that the present laws are adequate to handle this phase of the problem. All that is necessary is that they be thoroughly understood and intelligently applied.

The Ace of Spades

By WILLIAM MACLEOD RAINE

SYNOPSIS.

Jim Rutledge, accompanied by Sim Hart, is sent out with a herd of cattle to fulfill a contract made by his father, Chandler Rutledge. On the trail they are overtaken by some men from the Moss outfit, enemies of old Rutledge. The Moss men start a stampede and drive off some of the Rutledge cattle. Jim recovers them, but in doing so shoots and injures one of the Moss raiders. The men of the Moss outfit swear to be revenged for the injury and pursue him. Jim takes refuge in a ranch house where he finds a young girl busy baking pies.

INSTALLMENT VI.

HUNTED.

The intruder's eyes saw a girl still in her slender teens. Even in his haste he noticed, oddly enough, the little patch of flour on one temple below the cascades of red hair.

"You alone in the house?" he asked quickly.

His eyes had the look of a hunted man, not fear but wariness and a grim resolution to meet the threat of danger.

"Yes," she answered.

She looked at him with startled eyes, an odd excitement drumming in her veins.

"They're after me," he said.

"Who?"

"The Moss gang. They jumped me this side of Fisher Hill."

"What do they want with you?"

He took the wide brimmed hat from his head and looked at two small holes in it, one through the side and the other through the crown. The dilated eyes of the girl lifted from the hat to the man. Her heart was beating fast.

"They —— did that?"

Her heart stood still. She went white to the lips.

"In two-three minutes now," he added quietly.

The girl's gaze flashed to the window. Over the crest of the ridge a quarter of a mile away were coming riders, three or four of them, headed straight for the house.

She asked no more questions, wasted no words.

"This way," she told him, and opened the door into a small bedroom.

It was her own room. A frock and a nightgown in the closet, a pair of shoes peeping out beneath the bed, scattered hairpins on the homemade dresser, informed him of this.

"Up there," she said.

His eyes followed the sweep of her hand. Above the rafters was a floor of puncheon extending over two-thirds of the room.

"My horse is back of the house," he mentioned.

He took the wide brimmed hat from his head and looked at two small holes in it.

"I'll take care of it. Wait there till I come for you."

Her blanched face and troubled eyes betrayed the girl's inquietude. She was fighting to control the fear in her.

The young man smiled reassuringly, then swung himself by a rafter to the puncheon floor separating the room from the roof. Looking down, he watched her pass into the kitchen. She moved with the light lank grace he had observed in antelopes and other untamed creatures of the wild.

Ellen ran out of the house and pulled herself to the saddle of the gelding that waited in the shade. Its head dropped. Sweat stains discolored shoulders and flanks. She dug her heels in and forced the horse to a trot. There was a grove of young cottonwoods fifty yards from the house. She left the horse among the trees and scudded back to the log cabin.

When the first of the pursuers flung himself from his horse and strode into the kitchen Ellen was trimming with a knife the dough from the edge of the pie tin.

"Seen anything of a fellow passin' this way?" the man demanded brusquely. "Not five minutes since. Couldn't have been longer."

He was a tall, long-bodied man, with straight black hair, so dark that his swarthiness suggested Indian blood.

"A man passed the house, Sam. Went down into the cottonwoods. Looked like his horse was played out."

"Bet yore boots his bronc was played out. We had him cut off from town and from his camp. He's our meat now." Sam Moss called the good news to those outside. "We got him, boys. The damn scalawag just went down into the cottonwoods. His horse was wore out, Ellen says."

"We better go slow, boys," Roe advised. "Like enough he's in the cottonwoods now waitin' for us."

"Either that or hightailin' it down the crick. One of us better circle round the draw an' cut him off from below," a third man said.

Sam Moss laughed, cruelly and vindictively. "We've got him, Dave. Don't you worry yore head about that. I am to collect Mr. Rutledge pronto."

Ellen stood in the doorway. Her troubled gaze moved from Sam Moss to his brothers Pete and Dave. It came to rest on the youngest of the three.

"Who is this man, Dave?" she asked.

"It's the fellow who shot Steve. We'll even up that right now, Ellen," the boy boasted.

"Fellow called Jim Rutledge," Sam added. "Come on, boys. Buck, you an' Dave head him off below and Pete an' I will crowd him down to the crick."

Pete dismounted to join Sam. The other two rode away to cut off the flight of the hunted man.

The two Moss brothers moved cautiously toward the cottonwoods.

"He's got no rifle with him this time," Ellen heard Sam say to his brother. "If we don't get too close we can pick him off easy an' never give him a chance."

The excitement had died down in the girl and left instead a sick depression. She turned back into the house. Before passing into the bedroom she glanced through one of the kitchen windows to make sure those outside were still moving toward the cottonwoods.

The man whom she had saved dropped lightly from the puncheon ceiling as she came into the room. His eyes were eager with admiration.

"You did fine," he said. "I was scared your face would give you away."

She did not respond to his enthusiasm. "Is yore name Rutledge?" she asked abruptly.

"That's my name —— Jim Rutledge," he replied.

"You shot my brother Steve." Her eyes blazed anger at him.

He stared, for the moment dumb with surprise.

"Six weeks ago," she added. "Down the trail."

"Yore brother? Jiminy!"

"And you come here and beg me to hide you."

"Is yore brother a redheaded young fellow?"

"What had he done to you? Why did you want to kill him?" she demanded.

"I didn't want to kill him. And I didn't either. He's riding around good as ever, ain't he?"

"Why? I want to know why. What had he done to you?" she cried stormily.

"He was reaching for his pistol, and they were five to one against me. What could I do? Why does he run around with a bunch of cow thieves if he don't want to get in trouble?"

She flinched at that. It was an unexpected thrust, but he knew it had got under her guard.

"You had Moss cattle in yore herd," she charged.

"Not one," he denied. "They stampeded my herd and I found the rustlers driving away several hundred Circle R steers. If yore brother was one of the thieves ——"

"You can't say that to me," she cried wildly. "It's not true. It's not true. You'd better go. I don't want you here."

He laughed, grimly, the sardonic recklessness of his face in strange contrast with its boyishness. "I sure came to a good place to hole up. Well, sorry I disturbed you, miss. I'll be movin' along."

"Wait," she cried, barring the way. "What are you going to do?"

"What would you advise?" he asked, his eyes mocking her.

"You can't go —— yet."

"Why not? Is yore brother out there with the gents looking for my scalp?"

"No."

"Then why worry? If I bump off any one it won't be him."

She was furious at him. He stood there jeering at her, as though life and death were trifles. He did not plead with her to save him, yet he knew that if his enemies caught sight of him he was lost.

By Mae Tinée.

Good Morning!

The story will interest you. The brilliant and appealing work of Pauline Frederick will "get you where you live," as we say. You will be struck with the beauty of Lila Lee and the sincerity and restraint of her performance. Conrad Nagel will enlist your sympathy. Dale Fuller will intrigue you. Alec B. Francis will please you. So will Walter Byron and William Courtenay, though these last will arouse in you no particular enthusiasm. You will like the picture's photography and be satisfied with the voices of the players and the manner in which they are recorded. Sets and scenery—okay!

An excellent production in the main, you see. Its faults are lack of taste in the direction, and dialogue excrescence.

Warner Brothers WILL drag in their orchestra. No use nagging at them about it—they will do it. They love their orchestra. So—in "The Sacred Flame," Conrad Nagel sitting in a wheel chair on his lawn, sings to his bride with the full and impassioned accompaniment of saxophone, first, second and third violins, two pianos [I think], a bass viol, horn, harp [I suspect], guitars, banjos, piccolo and [I believe] all the reed instruments.

The effect is startling. You bat your eyes for a minute and wonder confusedly if maybe somebody is giving a musical next door. Then you get mad, say "How SILLY!" and resolve to write W. B. and tell them there are two sides to the "music hath charms" question. But you don't do it, because, as I said—what would be the use.

Then—still speaking of lack of taste—in the last scene a spirit form is brought out of the everywhere to march down a garden walk between two women. You may like your spirits this way, but all I can say is, the sudden spectral descent referred to brought to me sharp recollections of the Duncan Sisters in "Topsy and Eva" and it was no time to be thinking of the Duncan Sisters.

The plot. Ha, far be it from me to tell you the plot, having recently received an awful letter from a Fan who says I spoil pictures for her by telling all I know, and I thinking myself a positive genius at concealment! Well, this time I shall be, but it won't hurt anybody to know that Lila Lee marries Pauline Frederick's aviator son, Mr. Nagel, who has a terrible accident on his wedding day. Or that Pauline has another son, Mr. Byron, who arrives on the scene, hale, hearty, and handsome, just when Lila is pining for . . .?

Surely these statements are permissible, for, really, they gave you no idea of the problems spun by life, which are solved—as best they can be—by the characters in this story.

Dorothy Mackaill, though overdirected in spots, does some good work in this film, which, as adapted from the stage play, "The Woman on the Jury," makes acceptable entertainment. It's nicely synchronized and photographed.

She wins your sympathy and holds your interest, looking extremely lovely the while. As one Betty Brown, wronged by the man she loved, she finds herself the only woman on a jury that must decide the fate of another woman, who, situated practically just as Betty had been . . . well, the picture must reveal further details.

Alice Day is charming as the other woman. Edmund Burns qualifies as the perfect cad. Sidney Blackmer, from the "legit.," with the dilated nostril, world-weary eyebrow, and drooping O-heaven-why-ISN'T-there-a-Santy-Claus lips that have made him so popular, satisfies but does not stimulate as the nobleman of the story. Minor rôles are all splendidly handled. Scenes in the jury room are interesting and informative, if not always convincing. Personally, I'm not clear in my mind as to WHY the eleven good men and true do WHAT they do after they hear WHAT they hear. For the startling utterance that causes them to break down as one man is, after all, beside the question before them, which is: DID she or DIDN'T she?

It is in the jury box and jury room that Miss Mackaill, egged on, I suspect, by her director, becomes rather rampantly dramatic.

[Copyright: 1930: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, Jan. 31.—England's dream of a national theater was brought one step nearer the realization tonight with the "dramatic emperor of Europe," enrolled behind it. Such is the newest title which George Bernard Shaw has bestowed upon himself.

Mr. Shaw made the plea for a national theater in London while principal speaker at a demonstration of the British Drama league. The earl of Lytton presided.

Those present adopted a resolution, presented by Mr. Shaw, supporting the national theater project and welcoming its submission to the prime minister.

"What I want to see," Mr. Shaw declared, "is a theater without regard for commercial considerations, doing the best work there is—not the horrible policy of giving the public what it likes. Nobody knows what the public does like. I was entirely wrong myself. They objected to my extraordinarily excellent plays and said they were not plays at all, because they were not what they were accustomed to.

"But people would go to a state theater as a duty, just as they go to church. If the preaching is good, the music good and the clergymen are able to articulate clearly, the people find it is not so bad and form the church going habit. Besides, it is free. What St. Paul's and Westminster Abbey can be in this country's religion, so can a national theater be."

British Writer Decries U. S. "Mass Education" Policy

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Lafayette, Ind., Jan. 31.—"America has become so infatuated with the idea that mass production even has invaded the field of education, a situation that is most dangerous," so declared John Langdon Davies, English author, at Purdue university today. He said mass education invites mob psychology, the blind following of a leader, with unsuitable persons going to colleges merely because it is fashionable to do so. The spectacle of 45,000 young people going into hysterics at a football game at the behest of a cheer leader suggests that the same blind surge of emotion may be turned to hate, with dire results to the world, he said.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send your name and address with your question to "Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question A. G. Nyquest, 3315 Palmer street, was awarded $5.

The Question.

Would you rather spend an evening playing bridge or attending a movie?

The Answers.

John T. Willett, 216 Lamon avenue, bond expert—I would consider it of more benefit, educationally and otherwise, to attend a movie. The movies, even with their faults, put one in touch with the world's activities, modern methods of living, etc., as well as being interesting.

Miss Claire Lorenz, 7128 Merrill avenue, clerk—I would rather go to the movies. I consider them more entertaining and instructive; certainly more of a diversion. Games like bridge are rather strenuous on the nerves.

Martin Block, 6622 Glenwood avenue, insurance agent—I would rather spend the evening playing cards. Cards are fascinating to me. At a movie you merely can sit and watch; hardly daring to whisper during the show. There is mental exercise in a game like bridge; in fact, as much mental exercise as you care to get out of it.

Mrs. Bart G. Neville, 7431 Greenview avenue, housewife—I don't particularly care for either. I would rather spend an evening at the opera, a Chicago Symphony orchestra concert, or a recital. It seems like wasting time to play cards. Educational or historical movies are all right.

Frank Jann, 6725 Ridgeland avenue, business college student—I would rather spend the evening at a movie. In playing bridge there always are arguments; a game of bridge without arguments isn't much of a game; arguments are not so enjoyable. The movies are entertaining, instructive, and restful.

Hospital for Negroes Certainty; Fund of $3,000,000 Exceeded

The campaign for $3,000,000 for the new Provident hospital and training center for Negroes was completed yesterday. At the final luncheon of workers in the Hotel La Salle, amid loud applause, not only was the $3,000,000 goal reached, but exceeded by $115,644.

It would be hard to determine which final gift most pleased those who had been working for months. Julius Rosenwald cabled $220,000, the Pullman company gave $25,000. There came a cable from Mrs. Helen Nelson, wife of Francis Nelson, author, and daughter of Gustavus Swift, with the message, "Happy to help. Promise $50,000."

There also was the sum of $60,000 given as a testimonial to Dr. Frank Billings, campaign chairman, by twenty of his friends. Dr. Billings immediately turned that over to the hospital fund.

Dr. Billings was overcome when he was presented with the purse which his friends accumulated the preceding night "as evidence of their appreciation of his untiring effort in behalf of the hospital campaign.

"This campaign has done more to cement race relationship than any other one thing in Chicago," declared Alexander L. Jackson, colored president of the hospital's board of trustees. "It is the greatest thing that has ever been done for the Negro. The hospital will do more to help the Negroes help themselves than anything else by providing a center to train Negro doctors and nurses and give them material for research."

Col. A. A. Sprague, chairman of the campaign executive committee, asserted that "Dr. Billings, Mr. Rosenwald and Mr. Insull have put this thing across."

The program of coöperation between the Provident hospital and the University of Chicago provides for medical and surgical care of the sick, clinical instruction for Negro undergraduate medical students, increased number of internships for colored medical graduates, postgraduate education and training, professional advancement of highly qualified physicians on a par with opportunities now available only to whites, opportunity for teaching and research, for studying peculiar susceptibilities of the Negro to certain diseases, and study of Negro social problems. The new center will be started as soon as the Chicago Lying-In hospital moves from its old quarters to the new ones now under construction on the University of Chicago campus.

Of the $3,000,000 fund, $750,000 will purchase the plant of the Lying-In hospital, 426 East 51st street, $150,000 will be used to remodel it, $1,000,000 (the Rockefeller gift) will go to the university for teaching and research, and $1,100,000 has been set as the minimum needed to operate the plant.

The total subscriptions made by Negroes was increased to $159,583 when the south side campaign organization, at a meeting at the Savoy ballroom at 47th street and South Park way last night, reported new donations totaling $35,776. The south side group will close its campaign Monday night.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

It was the next to the last night before the close of the season when the Civic Opera company got around to putting on this great opera. "Carmen," however, is popular and in spite of everything, including a nonsubscription night, there was a crowd in attendance.

If the performance was not at all times up to the opera, it is because the score comes so near to being pure gold that only a few performances ever get to a complete realization of it. Naturally it has its high spots. Among them was Mme. Olszewska's performance of the card scene, which transcended anything she had done earlier in the performance. This was exactly as happened when she appeared in the part last season, and there would seem to be two reasons therefor. One is that she excels in a tragic scene, those of her Ortrud, Fricka, and Brangaene, for instance, and the other is that the card scene of "Carmen" lies in a highly effective range of her voice, while a good part of the rest of the rôle does not.

For other high points in the performance one can pick out Mr. Maison's solo of the flower in the second act and his duet with Miss Stiles in the first; Mr. Fromichi's jubilant Toreador song; Miss Stiles' duet in the first act and her solo in the third.

Mr. Cooper's tempos were occasionally different from any of those in memory, some of them faster, some slower. Possibly he was right. Only an intensive and thoughtful session with copy of the score and a metronome could settle some of the points.

Those who went to Orchestra hall yesterday afternoon heard Mr. Stock and the Symphony orchestra give the first performance of a symphony in B minor by Kurt Atterberg. The composer is the one who entered another symphony in the Schubert composers' contest of 1928 and won the first prize of $10,000. That particular work has not been heard yet. It has been declared to be full of reminiscences which Atterberg, in a magazine article called "How I Fooled the Music World," says he put there on purpose. All of which incited Ernest Newman to write an account of the proceedings, concluding with the words, "Attaboy, Atterberg."

But yesterday's piece was written about twenty years ago, before the barbed adjectives of this amusing controversy had begun to hiss through the air. If it had been written this year there might have been a good many things to say about it. There would have been surprise that any living composer could be so little infected by the modern idiom, more surprise of a congratulatory nature that he was able to write sustained melodies that really meant something, a bit of deprecation on his too frequent use of a too thick instrumentation.

Mr. Stock likewise presented part of Mozart's "Haffner" Serenade, a piece showing how closely akin he was to the Italian composers of his period, and incidentally a delightful bit of music.

ries of Wagner's "Siegfried" music, the "Siegfried Idyl," which does not belong to the opera, the "Voices of the Forest," and selections from the third act, which do. They are high spots of the music-drama, and they were played superbly.

That fine singer and fine artist of the Civic Opera company, Claudia Muzio, appeared in a song recital at Orchestra hall last evening. Her program was presented under the auspices of the Italian Woman's club for the benefit of the Italian charities. In excellent voice, she sang to a large audience and the applause was loud and long continued.

Young and the Aged Lack Proper Care, Social Workers Hear

That facilities for the care of young children and for the aged in Chicago are inadequate was revealed yesterday in a report by Wilfred S. Reynolds, executive director of the Chicago Council of Social Agencies. He also discussed what is being done to aid the jobless of the city.

"It is apparent through studies we have made that such facilities are insufficient for the prompt attention of children under two years old in need of short time or emergency care outside their own homes because of temporary dependency or neglect," Mr. Reynolds told 200 social workers at the annual meeting in the Hotel La Salle. "There is not enough specialized care of dependent children with behavior problems, not enough care for dependent and delinquent Negro children, of children born out of wedlock, or for the dependent crippled or physically handicapped.

"The problem of the care of the aged has been aided somewhat since a section of the Chicago council undertook last April a joint investigational and admission service which has reduced the congestion in waiting lists. Occupational therapy for those in homes has also helped."

Mr. Reynolds said the investigations by a special committee of the Council of Social Agencies has resulted in a plan to deal with the immediate difficulties of unemployment and to bring about improvement in the machinery of registration of the unemployed. The responsibility of dealing with immediate local unemployment has been referred to the civic affairs committee of the Chicago Association of Commerce, he said.

"Among the facts we have placed before that committee are the reports of the state department of labor showing the number of applicants to the number of employment opportunities offered through Chicago offices of the state free employment service. These have mounted in December to 202 applicants for each 100 jobs. The ratio, on a similar basis, shown by the Chicago Urban league for the same month was 254 applicants for each 100 jobs. The number of families requiring relief from the county bureau of public welfare increased from 312 in October to 2,377 in December; the United Charities found an increase from 170 in October to 607 in December, and there was nightly overcrowding of employment places."

Beardsley Rumi, executive director of the Spelman foundation, New York, in an address described Chicago as known both in this country and abroad as a coming great world center in social research and teaching.

"We have some cause for uneasiness," he said, in describing the social situation. "There are too many signs of deterioration and obsolescence. We have too much delinquency, too much insanity, too much unemployment, too much dependency. Our housing is outworn and our city plans obsolete. We must pull together. Individuals, social agencies, civic groups, universities, and government must do their share."

Edward L. Ryerson Jr. was re-elected president and Mrs. George R. Dean and George B. Foster vice presidents. Miss Mary E. Murphy is secretary and H. O. Edmond treasurer. New members of the board are Mrs. E. I. Cudahy, George W. Dixon, Helen L. Myrick, James L. Houghteling, and L. L. Valentine.

Dr. Michael M. Davis, director of medical service for the Julius Rosenwald fund, will discuss the cost of medical care this morning before the convention of the American Association of Hospital Social Workers in Billings Memorial hospital at the University of Chicago. One hundred delegates from various midwestern hospitals are attending the convention, which opened yesterday.

Deep Breathing and Exercises Develop the Figure

by Gabrielle Donnelly

How to develop the bust is becoming a frequent query addressed to this department, due, no doubt, to the trend of fashion toward the rounded figure.

There are two things that you can do that will automatically give you a rounder curve—two simple things, the first immediate in effect, the second immediately helpful, but taking a little longer to demonstrate to the fullest extent its value.

The first is to hold your chest up. And keep on holding it up. Never let it slump for a minute, whether you sit, stand, walk or run! Until you learn to do that you cannot expect any developments of the breasts. Holding the chest up will straighten the shoulders and there are muscles in the shoulders that control, to some degree, the uplift of the bust proper.

The order to hold the chest up has to be executed, too, for the benefit you get from the second influence—deep breathing. Deep breathing develops the muscles that give firmness to the bust and women with flabby busts, and perhaps large at the same time, may take this same advice to heart about breathing deeply and holding up the chest.

I am not convinced that massage is either very effective or generally advisable in this connection. Development from massage is so discouragingly slow that few women will stick it out long enough to note any improvement. Beside, bust development is regulated more or less by glandular efficiency, so that efficient internal organs are of primary importance. Erect carriage and deep breathing improve the entire system, making them, then, more powerful allies in a search for curved lines of bust than mechanical massage movements.

The reason swimming is advocated so generally for bust development [and incidentally, it is the best of all exercises for this particular thing] is that you have to breathe deeply when you swim and your chest is forced into a normal position with the strokes of the arms.

Where the chest is weak and narrow, constitutional treatment is needed along with the chest raising and deep breathing. The bust will develop normally when underweight is corrected, for instance.

Tribune Cook Book

BY JANE EDDINGTON.

Pate de Foil Gras.

The Strasbourg pie, or paté de foie gras, has long been a symbol, and to many an amusing symbol, of the most expensive of foods. To use it has become figurative of expensive living. The English name for the same thing is goose liver pie, and there are a great number of English recipes for goose's fat liver in English cook books. The English also pot the liver, while the Strasbourg product, paté de foie gras, is the same thing in "terrines." This preparation in the little earthen pot is sent all over the world and used as is by some peoples for an elegant sandwich filling. One of the favorite forms of sandwich with this filling is the finger type, small and dainty.

Once in a while some one writes me a letter asking how to use paté de foie gras. Therefore in receiving "Anne Foster Caldwell's Book of Southern and Creole Home Cooking," it was interesting to find on the very first page ways of using this preparation in making hors d'oeuvres. There are five ways given:

No. 1.—"Have the container of paté de foie gras chilled. Spread from the jar on small rounds of thin toast, one for each person. Serve on a salad plate with a garnish of one slice lemon, two slices of hard boiled egg, and a sprig of parsley.

No. 2.—"Lay on crisp lettuce hearts a teaspoon of paté de foie gras. Garnish with a slice of lemon and parsley. Serve with a small wafer.

No. 3.—"Make little balls of paté de foie gras and serve on chopped chicken aspic. Garnish with slices of lemon and parsley.

No. 4.—"Place on a small ramekin a bit of thin cold boiled ham. On top of this put half of a cold hard boiled egg. Pour over highly seasoned chicken aspic. When congealed, serve with a teaspoon of paté de foie gras on top. Garnish with parsley and a wafer.

No. 5.—"Spread a round of thin toast with paté de foie gras. On top place a slice of ripe cold tomato, a teaspoon of mayonnaise on tomato. Garnish with one slice of hard boiled egg and parsley."

Jack, aged 5, and Dorothy, aged 2½, accompanied mother to the market one morning. Mother told Jack to take charge of Dorothy while she did her purchasing.

Dorothy, being a lively child, must have been unusually so that morning, for soon Jack came back pulling her by the hand and said, "Here, mother, you take her. She's too loose!"

Miss Stevenson Is Engaged to Bruce Thorne

BY THALIA

It's most exciting to make known the engagement of the first debutante of the current season to accept the significant solitaire of betrothal. Such a pleasant task is ours this morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Stevenson, who only a few weeks ago presented their daughter, Marianne, to society, are announcing her engagement to Bruce Thorne, son of Mrs. George A. Thorne of 1130 Lake Shore drive.

Miss Stevenson was graduated from the Brearley school in New York City and attended Vassar college for two years. Her debut tea was an event of Nov. 18 and took place at the Stevenson residence at 1349 Astor street. Mr. Thorne went to the Hill school and was graduated from Yale in 1928. There are no definite plans yet for the wedding.

Both the Stevenson and Thorne families are long established and prominent in Chicago annals. News of his brother's engagement probably will be communicated to George A. Thorne by radio, as he is accompanying the Byrd expedition in the antarctic regions.

The Antiquarians' tea held yesterday afternoon in the society's austerely beautiful gallery overlooking McKinlock court at the Art institute was one of the largest daytime affairs of the now waning season. The occasion marked the opening of a loan collection of the 17th and 18th century looking glasses. While most of the mirrors were imported by the society from New York, several are possessions of well known Chicagoans.

Among the latter are a lovely pair of English looking glasses lent by Mrs. Patrick A. Valentine, a French 18th century glass owned by Mrs. William O. Goodman, an English cheval glass of the Queen Anne period belonging to Robert Allerton, and Mrs. John Borden's sapphire blue and white glass of the William and Mary period.

The tea table was covered with a cloth of the sheerest pale green chiffon embroidered in silver and laid over green crêpe. The cloth was lent for the event by Mrs. Potter Palmer. The centerpiece, provided by Mrs. Walter B. Wolf, consisted of an oval polished silver dish on a large mirror mounted on a black marble base. The only other decorations were two silver bowls of calla lilies.

Mrs. Chauncey McCormick, president of the Antiquarians, headed the receiving line and was assisted by Mrs. Waller Borden, vice president; Mrs. Parmelee McFadden, treasurer, and Mrs. George T. Langhorne, secretary. Mrs. McCormick wore brown velvet, Mrs. Borden a beige chiffon dress with a sable coat and brown felt hat, and Mrs. McFadden was in black.

Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick, in a black and white ensemble and wide brimmed black straw hat, was one of the first directors to take her place at the tea table. Others who took turns pouring included Mrs. Potter Palmer in black, Mrs. Walter B. Wolf in a beige velour suit trimmed in brown caracul, Mrs. James M. Hopkins, Mrs. Martin A. Ryerson in black, and Mrs. Clyde M. Carr.

Among those attending were Mrs. Robert Hall McCormick, wearing a black coat collared and cuffed in sable and black felt hat; her daughter, Miss Eleanor McCormick, in a tan ensemble; Mrs. Walter S. Brewster in a youthful looking three-quarter length coat of black caracul belted at the waistline and a lipstick red turban; Mrs. Chauncey B. Blair in a black frock and hat and beaver coat; Mrs. Shreve Badger in a hunter's green ensemble; Mrs. John H. Winterbotham, Mrs. Patrick A. Valentine Jr., Mrs. Edward L. Ryerson, Mrs. Frederick T. Vaux, Mrs. Paul Welling, Mrs. John De Koven, Mrs. John C. Shaffer, Mrs. Edgar J. Goodspeed, Mrs. Paul Shorey, Mrs. William Ennis, Mrs. Walter Kirk, Mrs. Herbert Bradley, Mrs. Carroll H. Sudler, Mrs. Louis C. Sudler, Miss Marie Rozet, Mrs. Katherine Winterbotham Buchanan, Mrs. Leroy Fuller, Mrs. Charles Dempster, Mrs. Henry Sturtevant, and Mrs. Robert E. Ross.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Stevenson of 1349 Astor street announce the engagement of their daughter, Marianne, to Bruce Thorne, son of Mrs. George A. Thorne of 1130 Lake Shore drive. Miss Stevenson is pictured as she appeared at her debut reception on Nov. 18.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Thurston Wood of Lakeland, Fla., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Mrs. Virginia Wood Safford, to Dr. Frederick M. Schmidt, son of Mrs. Frederick Rehm Schmidt of 222 East Delaware place. Dr. Schmidt was graduated from Yale and has been affiliated with the Grant hospital for three years. The wedding is to take place in March in Porto Rico, where Mrs. Safford is visiting her sister, Mrs. Edward Audas. Mrs. Schmidt and her daughter, Miss Dorothy Schmidt, plan to go to Porto Rico for the ceremony.

The Charles B. Goodspeeds have donated the wherewithal to make possible a performance of the Junior league's "The Princess and the Goblins," next Thursday afternoon to be attended by 800 crippled children.

James Keeley gave a dinner-dance in the roof bungalow of the Sherman hotel last night for his daughter, Mrs. Cabot Brown, who is here from San Francisco visiting Mr. Keeley and her sisters, Mrs. Luther S. Hammond Jr. and Mrs. Graham Aldis, for several weeks.

Increase Robinson Adopts Parisian Idea for Running Studio

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

One of the cleverest of the younger Chicago artists is Increase Robinson. She is a modernist and an adventurer. The two go together. In black and white she is exceptionally strong and in color she is daring and when she puts to flight a certain penchant for the studied and deliberate design she can be most fascinating. She has just introduced a new departure of Parisian parentage into Chicago's art world. Probably her own words of description are better than any I could think up for the story. She writes:

"The room [her studio, where what follows takes place] is the spacious, beautifully lighted southeast parlor of the Chicago Woman's club's old quarters on the ninth floor of the Fine Arts building. Certain days I have set apart for my own pupils, for teaching drawing, painting, and composition. Then, on Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons at 1 o'clock and on Tuesday and Thursday evenings at 7 o'clock artists who wish to draw from the model are welcome to come in and work for three hours for only 75 cents.

"We all work absolutely independently, without interference of any kind, in whatever medium we choose. Our only requirements are that those who come shall be serious students of art and shall pay their small fee on each and every occasion. It is a Parisian idea, of course, and rather an innovation in Chicago. The studio atmosphere really is an inspiration, with a fine collection of prints on the walls, illustrating the works of ancient and modern masters, and, on the tables, contemporary art books and current magazines."

Some of the artists who are taking advantage of this opportunity are Emil Arnim, whose painting is fantastically imaginative; Frances Foy—her touch is delightfully light; Jean Crawford Adams—her pictures are colorful; Beatrice S. Levy, who has been doing some nice things in etchings; Gustaf Dalstrom, a painter of realistic modernist tendencies; Agnes Van Ryn, Hermine Stellar, Frances Badger—her work is decorative, and amusing, and sturdy—and Tunis Ponsen.

The South Side Art association announces an exhibit of paintings by Adrian Dornbush and Theodore Saunders, opening Monday in their gallery in the Fine Arts building.

ANTI-CORSET REBELS HAVE STYLE DAY AT PARIS DRESS ATELIER

PARIS, Jan. 31.—(AP)—The rebels in the style ranks, whose battle cry is "Cancel corsets," were upheld today in Lucien Lelong's summer display. Modern Dianas—sans a single stay—modelled the couturier's slim-waisted fashions.

The front row of a musical comedy chorus could be no more guiltless of whalebone than the slim manniquins who paraded M. Lelong's new styles, stressing ground length evening dresses, medium length street clothes, sports dresses six inches below the knee—and bodices that snug milady's waist.

Jaunty suits reminiscent of men's athletic underwear but designed as tennis togs for "la femme" made their fashion debut here today with the stylist debut of their creator, Suzanne Lenglen.

Children Have a Right to Upset the House at Times

By Mrs. Gladys Huntington Bevans

A "Play Booklet," by Mrs. Bevans, for mothers of pre-school children, will be sent free on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

A child who is having a good time at home is almost sure to upset the house. Or at least the part of it he is playing in. And if you want him to be a happy, occupied child you have to resign yourself to it.

If he is old enough he may learn to clear up after himself or help with the clearing up. But he can't avoid producing a certain amount of disorder with his playthings and he's not going to feel free and satisfied in his play if some one expects him to be quiet, to keep clean, and not to litter up the house.

After all, it's his house as much as it's ours; so he should be allowed to make the use of it that fits in with his needs. The fact that our living quarters are often too small is not his fault. The fact that we care paramountly about the coverings of our chairs and the finish on our tables is not his fault. The fact that we want a house that is always orderly and clean is not his fault.

But all these conditions are often his misfortune, and they should not be. I'm not quarreling with the fact that we like orderly houses and dislike extra work. But we should be the ones to make the compromises in this respect. Too often it is the children who make them.

Even with the best of parents and the most favorable of surroundings a child has to make constant concessions to our civilized world. He has to fit himself, even at best, to an adult scale of living. So what happens when he hasn't the best of parents is hard on him. Then his activities are classed as "making work for mother" or "messing up the house." Then he is "don't-ed" and "no-ed" and expected to be a good little boy or girl. In other words, to be a good little docile jellyfish.

Clever Little Bows Replace Buttons

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—[Special.]—Youthful Paris ensembles are sporting bows. The more sophisticated clothes in fashion's merry-go-round have practically abandoned them, but gay young clothes go right on tying up with them just the same. Every dressmaker device that can promote prettiness is legitimate in the creation of chic for the young, and naturally all sorts of bows abound. The newest thing is a whole row of little kittens' ear bows down the front of a blouse or jacket, replacing the mature allure of buttons. Lucile Paray, who is having a tremendous vogue in Paris as the youngest and newest fashion creator is responsible for this bow-instead-of-button movement.

We have seen three bows on a blouse front before, but who has thought to give us ten, as Lucile Paray does in the model illustrated? This ensemble is from her mid-season collection and has more than the bow arrangement to make it memorable. The combination of pink with black, which is prettier and more youthful than the black and white one sees everywhere, is an interesting item of this ensemble, and a significant part of winter fashions. Another detail to take note of is the different arrangement of shirring.

You wouldn't believe it, but the dress of this ensemble is two piece, and the skirt joins the waist under the shirring, at the normal waistline. There is a blouse, the upper part and sleeves of which are made of pink satin brocaded with black dots. The ten little bows down the front are made of the brocade. The lower part of the blouse is shirred into the under-arm seams, and the deep skirt yoke is shirred at the sides.

The skirt is flared by pie-piece godets [Paris likes them better than plaits] and it is scalloped around the bottom. The lower blouse, skirt and straight jacket are made of square weave wool crêpe. The jacket is trimmed with astrakan. The cunning hat has a band of pink felt, tied in a kitten-ear bow at the nape of the neck, and a fitted crown of black astrakan. The bag is black suede with pink and black enamel mounting. The shoes are black suede.

BY DORIS BLAKE.

A girl explains her feelings for the man who wants to marry her as "emotional but no sense to it." The man, while having considerable appeal in an emotional way, is anything but companionable intellectually. At the moment when the girl about makes up her mind that he is a dear, he jolts her sensibilities with an outrageous assault on the King's English, or he will commit some grotesqueries when they are out in company, to which she responds with embarrassment. Yet he is a thoughtful soul in his own way and kind and there is no doubt in the girl's mind that she stands ace high with him.

Bringing logic to a marriage consideration, is not one of the most popular pastimes, judging from our divorce records. But, gracious, how many women [and men] have lived to regret that they did not think of that future day when intellectual companionship would matter! Emotion alone, though it does rush thousands of couples into marriage, does not remain one-half so long as where it is supplemented with mental companionship.

Marriage often does this sort of thing—perhaps because you have more time for the sort of thing: After a year of two or three there is a tendency for one partner, usually the one who is more highly educated, to stand off, mentally as it were, and appraise the other critically.

And a great disappointment is upon the cultured one. Unless she [or he] can influence the mate, while still young enough to absorb culture readily, to set about improving him or herself—the disappointment can easily grow into a perfect mountain of grievance.

Alone, a woman can bear with more fortitude crudities of speech or manners in her mate. But when he is on parade before others that strong ingredient known as pride suffers painfully—and it is pretty difficult to differentiate between pride in her man and love for him that motivates certain women.

DORIS BLAKE ANSWERS

Don't Acquire the Habit.

"Dear Miss Blake: I refuse to phone my boy friend occasionally, and I think it's his place to call me. Am I right? DORA."

It is not advisable to form the telephone habit, but boys should find it a pleasure to telephone their best girls.

Wait a While.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 17 and deeply in love with a young man my own age. Do you think we are too young to become engaged? A. S."

You're much too young to become engaged, A. S. As you grow older you'll find your tastes will change from time to time.

PATTERNS BY CLOTILDE

[Registered U. S. Patent Office.]

WOMAN'S OR MISS' DRESS.

This design is outstandingly smart, with the long rever collar reaching to the waistline, and the princess lines. The surplice and one sided effect of the bodice makes it becoming for the larger woman, for it minimizes the width through the waist. Crêpe satin in black or dark brown will be smart with the collar cut from the reverse side of the crêpe.

The pattern, 3245, comes in sizes 16 and 18 years and 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 4⅛ yards of 39 inch material with ⅝ yard of 39 inch contrasting and 2¾ yards of binding.

FARM AND GARDEN BY PAUL POTTER

Poor seed and checks in growth have been blamed largely by growers for seed stalks on cabbage and celery. But recent experiments at Cornell university place the blame on temperature. Checks now are used to prevent seeding. In nineteen comparisons plants checked in growth by drying the soil did not grow a seed stalk, while the unchecked plants grew seed stalks. There is no advantage in early planting unless seed is kept above 55 degrees until planted.

A large percentage of seeders resulted with plants grown in cold frames with temperature between 45 and 50 degrees for thirty days. Plants growing for fifteen days at the same temperature developed some seeders, and those growing for ten days resulted in eight per cent of seed stalks. Comparative lots grown in the greenhouse at 55 degrees until planting time produced no seed stalk.

While the early crop is usually the most damaged, the late planting can suffer some loss in spite of the fact that the plants are not set in the field until June. This is likely to occur if the seed is sown in outdoor beds about the middle of April, or even in the latter part of April and if the weather is cool. For this reason it is best to sow the seed as late as possible.

Some varieties and strains of celery develop seed stalks more readily than others. In general, the early, rank growing strains shoot to seed most readily.

POINCARE WELL AGAIN; RETURNS TO POLITICAL LIFE

But He Finds His Old Job Run Nicely by Another.

BY WILLIAM SHIRER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Jan. 31.—With his health completely restored following two major operations last summer, Raymond Poincaré, wartime president and peacetime savior of France, will return to Paris tomorrow to resume—as he put it himself today—"political activities."

He has been convalescing on the Riviera for the last three months, and despite his 70 years, close friends declare, he is feeling better than at any time since the war.

Whether the former premier will confine his "political activities" to sitting in the senate, where he represents the department of Meuse, or whether he plans a more ambitious program is causing much conjecture in political circles tonight.

New Power Arises.

Last summer, when he turned over the reins of government to Aristide Briand, there was a general understanding that he would be willing to become premier again as soon as he regained his health. Then no other strong man loomed on the horizon of French politics and M. Poincaré could have had the job of running the government for the asking.

But a new power seems to have arisen miraculously since the early days of last November, when the chamber of deputies looked desperately to find a new leader to replace the defeated M. Briand. He is André Tardieu, who looks the part of an American business man and acts like one. Ironing out internal political difficulties by a show of force, much as M. Poincaré had done before him, Premier Tardieu quickly won his spurs at the second Hague conference, where he brought back the bacon for France.

What Will Poincaré Do?

Even tonight the Parisian press lauds him to the skies for forcing Prime Minister MacDonald of Great Britain and American Secretary of State Stimson to accept the French thesis of naval limitation by global tonnage at the London conference, and there is general confidence among all political parties here that if anybody comes out on top in London it will be the energetic young Tardieu.

Thus M. Poincaré returns to find himself somewhat supplanted in the hearts of his countrymen by a man who until recently was one of his political enemies. What he intends to do about it he is guarding as a close secret.

MRS. ALICE BATES IS DEAD; NOTED AS AN EDUCATOR

Mrs. Alice E. Bates, 87 years old, Chicago civic leader and educator, died yesterday at the home of her son, Fred G. Bates, in Toledo, O., where she had been visiting since Christmas. She had been ill only a few days. Mrs. Bates was the widow of George Chapman Bates and was the mother of Henry M. Bates, dean of the college of law at the University of Michigan. She was one of the first members of the Chicago Woman's club and had been active as an educator for nearly a half century, having founded the Park institute, a preparatory school for girls. In recent years she had made her home at the Windermere hotel, 1642 East 56th street.

LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE: Her Hero

BY ELMER DOUGLASS.

The curtain raiser for last evening's attractive entertainment was the glee club of the Illinois Wesleyan university, from W-G-N, 7:30 to 8.

The dramatic episode of the Landing of the Pilgrims, from W-G-N, 8 to 8:30, was the first of a weekly series of pageants depicting America's history. This is one of the things that radio does exceedingly well.

Pat Barnes' program, W-G-N, 9 to 9:30, is something that Mr. Barnes does exceptionally well. Bizet's life and works was the theme last evening. In this program the musical factor is usually all but incidental, the life story of the composer being the principal factor; yet this arrangement is so aptly handled that it is successful.

Albert Rappaport, Chicago Opera company tenor, was the soloist on an all-Mozart concert under the direction of Leon Bloom from WBBM, 8:30 to 9.

José Mojica, another Chicago Civic Opera tenor, was soloist on the orchestral concert from KYW the same 8:30 to 9 hour.

SWANSON CLEARS BUSCH; HOLDS HIM INDISCREET

State's Attorney John A. Swanson yesterday exonerated his assistant, Harry J. Busch, whose name was mentioned in tapped telephone conversations in connection with the recent investigation of the activities of a north side robber gang alleged to be headed by Tommy Abbott. Busch at the time was taken to the detective bureau to explain a reported conversation between himself and a woman friend of Abbott's in which he was said to have boasted of an "in" in the office of Chief Investigator Pat Roche.

"I have thoroughly investigated all the facts and circumstances that have been publicly referred to as to the conduct of this assistant (Busch), as well as all other information obtainable," said the statement issued yesterday by Swanson after nearly a week of deliberation. "I find that during the time he has been trying cases here his work has been highly satisfactory.

"I find no evidence that leads me to believe that Mr. Busch has been guilty of attempting to give any aid or assistance to any criminal or criminals or has been disloyal to his duties as an assistant state's attorney. The worst that may be said is that he was indiscreet in not revealing what appeared to be efforts to obtain information from him by persons not entitled thereto."

RITES TODAY FOR REV. DENIS HAYES, "CURFEW PRIEST"

Funeral services for the Rev. Denis Hayes, 78 years old, for more than thirty years the pastor of St. Rose of Lima church at 47th street and Ashland avenue, will be held at 10 a. m. today at St. Bridget's church, where he said his first mass fifty-six years ago. Burial will be at Calvary cemetery. Father Hayes died on Thursday at the Mercy hospital after an illness of a week.

While he was pastor at St. Rose of Lima church twenty years ago he instituted the curfew for his parish, for which he was noted. He used to ring the bell himself every night at 8:45 o'clock and then walk through the streets of the district to enforce the curfew against children with a blackthorn stick which he always carried.

Father Hayes was born in Ireland and came to America in 1869, receiving his education at St. Francis' college in Milwaukee and St. Mary's seminary in Baltimore. He was ordained a priest in 1874. He celebrated his golden jubilee at St. Bridget's church in 1924. In 1883 he was transferred from Morris, Ill., to St. Rose of Lima church and continued in the pastorate until about ten years ago, when he retired. For the last few years he had been chaplain of the Mercy High school.

RECORDS SEEN AT AUTO SHOW; CLOSES TONIGHT

The thirtieth annual National Automobile show will close tonight at the Coliseum after a week's display which has attracted what officials believe may be a record breaking crowd. While no statistics on attendance and sales were available for the entire week of the show, officials of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce declared that it unquestionably was a success. More than 40,000 persons visited the Coliseum last Saturday night and Sunday, and the attendance was proportionate throughout the week.

This year's show, at which $5,000,000 worth of the latest models of automobiles was on display at the Coliseum and at dealers' displays in the downtown district, was marked by a greater technical interest in construction and operation of the cars, according to automobile men. This was evidenced by the public's careful scrutiny of new improvements in the mechanism of cars, especially where there were changes in carburetors and lubrication systems.

Seller of Stolen Auto Is Shot by Policeman

Trapped by Police Sergt. Charles Gleason of the auto detail as he called yesterday to collect payment for a stolen car he had sold the B. F. Auto Parts company, 2220 South State street, Richard McKinley, 40 year old Negro, 723 East 40th street, tried to flee and was shot in the neck by the sergeant. He was taken to the bridewell hospital where surgeons said last night that he might not recover.

PASTOR GRILLED ABOUT HIS STOCK SALES TO FLOCK

Big Sums Believed Lost by Churchmen.

New York, Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Dr. Fenwicke L. Holmes, pastor of the Church of Divine Science, was questioned by Deputy Attorney General Watson M. Washburn today after being subpoenaed to tell about his part in selling thousands of shares of alleged worthless mining stocks to his parishioners.

Mr. Washburn said today that Dr. Holmes, his brother, William H. Holmes, and William C. Carr of William C. Carr & Co. are defendants in a civil action brought by him for a permanent injunction to restrain them from selling more stock.

Estimates of Losses High.

The minister was questioned at some length today and his examination will continue in an effort to learn of his sale of Fremont Grant, Inc., stock and other securities. Estimates of the loss to church members run from hundreds of thousands to millions of dollars.

Dr. Holmes' activities first came to the attention of the bureau of securities of the attorney general's office several months ago when he was subpoenaed to appear before the deputy attorney general. He previously had been enjoined temporarily from selling stocks.

Dr. Holmes moved to vacate the subpoena, contending that the attorney general did not have the right to examine him after having brought the injunction proceedings. The minister was upheld by the Supreme court in Brooklyn, but this decision was reversed by the Appellate division.

An Active Salesman Since 1920.

Investigation by officials of the bureau of securities showed that Dr. Holmes and three brothers, William H., Ernest S. and Guy Holmes, had been active in the sale of questionable mining stocks since 1920.

The method used by Dr. Holmes was to meet members of his congregation who appeared affluent and during the course of teachings in metaphysics and divine healing sell them "material prosperity" in the form of stock of Fremont Grant, Inc., Princeton Gold Mines company and the Arizona Tucson Copper company.

New Tax Indictments by U.S. Jury Hit Ralph Capone

New indictments charging Ralph Capone, brother of Al Capone, with income tax fraud were returned by the federal grand jury yesterday to supplant previous indictments returned several months ago. A plea in abatement had been filed against the old charges, Capone's counsel declaring they were invalid because unauthorized persons were in the grand jury room during questioning of witnesses. This plea was overruled by Federal Judge Wilkerson yesterday after the new indictments had been returned. Capone, whose case is set for trial Feb. 10, entered a plea of not guilty.

SEEK TO FORCE NICKEL PLATE TO HALT ALL TRAINS

Members of the council track elevation committee yesterday voted to ask the city council to empower Police Commissioner Russell and Commissioner of Public Works Wolfe to cause all Nickel Plate trains to make stops at the 95th street crossing just west of Stony Island avenue. Failure of the railroad to complete its track elevation program at that point, which was begun three years ago, was given as the reason for the committe's action.

Charges that the Nickel Plate is inconveniencing the people at 95th street to compel the city to surrender 103d street for yard purposes, were made by H. H. Haylett, executive vice president of the Greater South Side Chamber of Commerce. The tracks now block 103d street.

John Dillon, engineer for the comittee, was directed to draft and submit within two weeks an ordinance compelling the Illinois Central to elevate its tracks on 71st street between Stony Island and Exchange avenues and on Exchange avenue between 71st and 79th streets.

Irish Prelate Dies; Had His Grave Dug Few Weeks Ago

BELFAST, Northern Ireland, Jan. 31.—(AP)—Canon John O'Nolan, who at a cost of $500,000 built the Irish National Memorial church at Toome, near Lough Neagh, and a beautiful grotto near Lourdes, France, died here today. Feeling the approach of death a few weeks ago, he had his grave dug in full view of his bedroom window.

DR. WM. FAUNCE, NOTED BROWN U. EDUCATOR, DIES

Providence, R. I., Jan. 31.—(AP)—Dr. William H. P. Faunce, noted educator and president emeritus of Brown university, died at his home here today. He was 71 years old and retired only last June as active head of the university. Death was caused by bronchial pneumonia and a heart weakness.

For nearly half a century Dr. Faunce, a Baptist minister, had taken an active part in the formation of educational and college training plans. His success was so outstanding that almost a dozen colleges conferred honorary degrees upon him.

He was born in Worcester, Mass., and was graduated at Brown in 1880. After leaving a seminary he served for five years as a pastor in Springfield, Mass., and for ten years at the Fifth Avenue Baptist church in New York. In 1899 Dr. Faunce was elected president of Brown university. He favored the participation of all students in some form of sport, but condemned any tendency to make sport a "species of war."

WOMAN KILLED BY AUTO; TOLL FOR JANUARY 54

Mrs. Mary Mueller, 72 years old, 5616 North Ashland avenue, was killed yesterday when she was struck by an automobile driven by Theodore Morris, 1814 Farwell avenue. Mrs. Mueller was crossing Hollywood avenue at Ashland when she stepped into the path of Morris' car.

This death raised the county's 1930 toll to 54, which is six less than in January of 1928 when 60 were killed by automobiles.

NO TROUBLE AT ALL NOW

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN Has Benefited This Woman

Millions today are eating Kellogg's ALL-BRAN—guaranteed to relieve both temporary and recurring constipation.

The cause of constipation is the lack of roughage in food. Add sufficient roughage and constipation disappears. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is nearly all roughage.

Here is a letter from Mrs. H. Gilbert, 107 E. Knight Ave., Collingswood, N. J., which will be interesting to many sufferers:

"I had a very serious operation in October and when I came from the hospital my main trouble was constipation. One day I said to the doctor, 'I am going to eat ALL-BRAN,' and since I started I have no trouble whatever. So you see I can't praise it enough and am always telling my friends what it did for me."

You will enjoy the nut-like flavor of this delicious, ready-to-eat cereal. It is rich in iron, and when eaten with milk or fruit juices, adds important vitamins to the diet.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is an essential in any reducing diet. It means every-day health to people all over the world. Your grocer has it in the red-and-green package. Served everywhere. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

CEMENT VOTED BACK ON FREE LIST BY SENATE

Coalition Says It Saves Consumer Millions.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Consuming interests again triumphed over industry today in the senate. Cement was restored to the free list by a vote of 40 to 35. It meant, according to those who opposed the duty as provided in the house bill and approved by the senate finance committee, a saving of possibly 100 million dollars to the consumers of the country.

As against this view those favoring the duty contended that the effect of protection would be felt only in areas along the seaboard where foreign cement competes with the domestic industry and that prices in inland sections would not be increased in the slightest.

The restoration of cement to the free list presented another victory for the coalition of Democrats and radicals. The senate previously restored lumber and shingles and hides, leather and shoes to the free list, proposed duties on which were major grounds for criticism of the bill as passed by the house. Action has not been taken as yet on brick, which also was shifted from the free list and made dutiable in the house bill.

In the roll call 15 Republicans, 24 Democrats and one Farmer-Labor member voted to restore cement to the free list, while 29 Republicans and 6 Democrats voted to retain the proposed duty of 8 cents a 100 pounds.

Senator W. H. McMaster [Rep., S. D.] led the attack on the duty on cement. Senator G. P. Nye [Rep., N. D.] presented information from income tax reports, as furnished to the finance committee by the treasury, purporting to show large profits by leading cement companies. Senator Guy Goff [Rep., W. Va.] countered with data as furnished by the industry. Senator Royal S. Copeland [Dem., N. Y.] asserted that the cement companies on the eastern seaboard are in need of protection.

Senator McMaster contended that the cement industry has enjoyed prosperity under free trade.

LEGGE BLAMED BY SENATOR FOR DROP IN COTTON

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.—(AP)—Blame for yesterday's decline in the cotton market was placed on Chairman Legge of the farm board today by Senator Harris [Dem., Ga.], who contended in the senate that the drop of $2.50 a bale had reduced the value of cotton on hand by $50,000,000.

The Georgia senator based his charge first on a newspaper account that Legge had told reporters in an informal conference yesterday that the board was not going to buy any cotton. After being asked what the chairman had said, Harris obtained the facts from Legge and repeated:

"I wish to say that the statement was unwise, was uncalled for, and that it cost us millions of dollars, even in the way he put it."

National Capital Notes

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(AP)—Representative McCormick [Dem., Mass.] made public a letter addressed to Maj. James M. Curley of Boston, in which he concurred with the belief expressed by the mayor that New England congressmen should form a bloc to retaliate against farm relief in the tariff contest.

Stating he believed Supt. Arnold of the Klamath Indian reservation in Oregon had "outlived his usefulness," Chairman Frazier of the senate Indian affairs committee said he would call the attention of the Indian bureau to complaints filed with the committee against the superintendent.

The application of the Central Broadcasting company to take over the operation of Iowa's two largest broadcasting stations, WHO of Des Moines and WOC of Davenport, was approved by the radio commission.

Sharp charges and contradictions were heard before the house immigration committee as Representative Free [Rep., Cal.] characterized Francis I. Jones, director of the United States employment service, as a "propagandist and theorist."

Chairman Frazier of the senate Indian affairs committee postponed the Indian hearings scheduled for next week in Oklahoma.

A joint resolution to prohibit the federal power commission from issuing permits under the water power act affecting the Columbia river between the Grand Coulee dam site and the Canadian border until an investigation now under way by the war department chief of engineers is completed, was adopted by the senate and sent to the house.

U. S. IS BACK OF YOU, HYDE TELLS ILLINOIS FARMER

It Realizes "Complex Problems," He Says.

BY PAUL POTTER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Arthur M. Hyde, secretary of agriculture, told the Illinois Agricultural association convention here today that the national administration not only believed American agriculture was entitled to an American market, but that every effort was being made by it to assist farmers in their "complex problems."

Resolutions adopted by the convention this afternoon forecast another strenuous effort to revise revenue laws so as to place taxation in Illinois on "ability to pay instead of upon ownership of property."

A new policy of the association toward cooperative marketing, established during the last year, was approved. It provides that all new cooperatives created by the farm bureau be so financed that a "stabilizing" interest in their control remain in the Illinois Agricultural association.

Other policies approved by the association include: Close coöperation with the federal farm board (despite the fact that the association sponsored another type of legislation); investigation of present motor vehicle license fees on tractors and trucks; urgent need of a tariff on soybeans; licensing of handlers of fruits and vegetables; establishment of standard grades for hogs; investigation of importation of infected cattle; and the diverting of "marginal lands" into forestation projects.

CARNERA KNOCKS OUT RIOUX IN 47 SECONDS

CONFERENCE WILL REINSTATE IOWA TODAY, REPORT

FACULTY CHIEFS MEET HERE TO REVIEW CASE

No Bar Remains to Readmission.

University of Iowa, ousted from the western conference last May for subsidizing and proselyting of athletes, probably will be reinstated today. Faculty representatives from Big Nine schools will meet at the University club this afternoon for the purpose of discussing Iowa's case.

The special meeting, according to conference authorities, was called to spare Iowa further embarrassment. It had been reported that the North Central Association of Colleges intended to investigate conditions at Iowa at its meeting March 7. There will be no occasion for this survey, it is said, if Iowa is restored to good standing.

Thomas E. French of Ohio State chairman of the Big Nine subcommittee which recently visited Iowa City to review the situation, told THE TRIBUNE last night that Iowa met the major requirement for reinstatement when it ruled 13 athletes ineligible last December. These athletes were charged by the conference as being beneficiaries of the trust fund established at the university several years ago.

Report Will Be Presented Today.

Prof. French has forwarded the report of his committee to Prof. William Marshall of Purdue, secretary of the Big Nine faculty committee. It will be presented at the meeting today. The session was called at the request of French.

A member of the Big Nine faculty committee, who asked that his name be withheld, denied that pressure had been brought against the conference to reconsider Iowa's case. He said Iowa had certain problems it wished settled. The Big Nine, he poined out, stands ready to give the Hawkeyes a square deal.

Asked if he thought any of the athletes disqualified by Iowa would be ruled eligible, he said that they could apply for reinstatement at any time. They would be shown every consideration, he stated. He doubted that this point would be considered at today's meeting.

None of the other faculty delegates last night would discuss today's meeting. Prof. Ralph Aigler of Michigan would not admit that there was to be a meeting.

Prof. Marshall declined to state whether there was any possibility of Iowa's reinstatement. He said he had no knowledge that the Iowa matter was to come before the meeting.

Prof. J. F. A. Pyre, Wisconsin's faculty representative, would make no definite statement that the Iowa affair would be considered.

Declines to Comment.

"Would you vote for the reinstatement of Iowa, after the investigations which your committee has made?" he was asked.

"I'd rather not say anything before the meeting," he replied.

"If Iowa were reinstated what is your opinion of the status of the thirteen athletes recently suspended for participation in the so called 'slush fund?'" was the next query.

"I don't like to mention that before the meeting."

From reliable sources, however, THE TRIBUNE learned that Iowa's case will be the main business before the meeting and that the school is almost certain to be reinstated.

It is improbable that Iowa can compete with conference teams for another year, even if it wins immediate reinstatement. Schedules have been drawn in all spring sports and for 1930 football. The school probably could send athletes to the conference indoor and outdoor track meets.

The first action in ousting Iowa from the Big Ten was taken at a meeting of the faculty committee, May 25 last year, when all athletic relations were severed, effective Jan. 1. The Hawkeyes made two unsuccessful attempts to have the suspension rescinded, their last plea coming on Dec. 1. At this session Iowa's petition was discussed for 14 hours before it finally was rejected.

BY HARLAND ROHM.

Michigan won its second conference basketball game this week by outscrambling Chicago, 29 to 16, at Bartlett gym last night. The victory moved the Wolverines up to a tie with Illinois for third place in the Big Nine and the Maroons dropped to a tie for last with Minnesota with four defeats.

It was only in the second half that Chicago gave Michigan any trouble, for throughout the first half the Wolverines wandered casually about the floor, scoring now and then to build up a lead of 20 to 6. The Ann Arbor boys weren't playing particularly good basketball, but the Maroons were tossing the ball away by traveling, bad passes, and fumbling.

Changnon Sinks Three.

Bob Chapman, Michigan captain, who jumps center and drops back to guard, was taking all the rebounds off the Maroons' backboard. The one bright spot from a Chicago viewpoint was the three baskets made by Capt. Changnon.

The second half was a different kind of game. It didn't reach any particular peaks of skill, but the Maroons returned to the contest to play a hard, rough game and for a time they had the Wolverines on the run. Chicago scored four baskets, while Michigan could get only one and a free throw.

Michigan Quells Rally.

But with the Maroons only nine points behind, Capt. Chapman issued an oration to this effect: "Settle down and make your passes short," and Chicago didn't go very far after that. Ashley, who returned to Chicago's lineup and limped about on an infected foot, added a basket, but Michigan got two more.

Truskowski was missing his hook shots from the foul line, the ball rolling around or over the hoop half a dozen times, so Kanitz led in baskets with four. "Truck" tied him in points with four free throws added to his two baskets.

GHOSTS WALK IN THAT ABANDONED NEWARK PARK

Pegler Reminisces About Other Days.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Charleston, S. C., Jan. 31.—On your right beside the tracks of the Pennsylvania as the trains come up from under the Hudson river and straighten out for the runs to the south and west you may see some rusty concrete stumps and the sagging frame of an old ball yard score board.

This is the first scene in a sport travelogue from Broadway, New York, to Land's End at Key West. Those concrete stumps are the old foundation blocks of the Newark plant of the late Federal league. There the employés of the rump concern disported an erratic brand of baseball, sometimes very good but generally very so-so, if that.

The Federal league magnates really originated the idea of rubberizing the official ball so as to stimulate the hitting, create a homerun king, and alienate the customers of the two old leagues. If they had had the audacity of their convictions they might have created a Babe Ruth of their own as long ago as 1915, but it was the sense of the majority in their business counsels that forty or forty-five homers in one season would be just plumb ridiculous and defeat their own purpose. So they rubberized their baseballs to just a modest degree and it remained for the old line proprietors to capitalize their bright idea to the limit of its possibilities five years later.

Other Leagues Take Idea.

This seemingly trivial and impractical notion was simply lumped in among the sundry and miscellaneous properties of the Federal league when the rebels sold out to the trust after the season of 1915, but it has earned millions for the stockholders of the American and National leagues since then and has paid Babe Ruth alone more than half a million in wages.

Harry Sinclair, the truculent genius of the Federal league, was much more accessible and chatty in those days than he was to become some years later. But when he was having his quarrels with the government the old baseball reporters recognized the same rough and tumble nature that had puzzled and terrified the complacent old ticket choppers who owned the established leagues in the days of the baseball war.

The story went, in those days, that Sinclair, an Oklahoma soda clerk earning very few dollars a week, had shot himself in one foot, collected sixty dollars on an accident insurance policy, bought land with the money, sold it to an oil company, bought more land, sold it to another oil company, bought a lot more land, organized his own oil company and, so, had become rich. At the time I speak of he was most famous for one picturesque challenge which, in the light of subsequent revelations of his character, I now believe he was quite ready to carry through.

How Sinclair Reversed the Call.

One of the major league magnates called Mr. Sinclair a fourflusher and a tablecloth millionaire and Mr. Sinclair issued a public defi to any magnate in either of the old leagues to meet him at the Battery wall in New York harbor and toss silver dollars into the sea with him, turn and turn about.

"I will toss dollar for dollar," he said, "until my arm wears out, and my arm is in great shape. The one who quits first is the fourflusher and tablecloth millionaire."

The Federal league couldn't win. In those days sport editors were supreme on their own sports pages and so many of the sports editors were subsidized either socially or otherwise by the major league proprietors in their respective cities, whom they had known for years, that they vilified the new league with all the abandon Cantillon Dies; to Be Buried in Janesville, Wis.

JOE CANTILLON.

High on a bluff overlooking the Mississippi river he loved, "Pongo Joe" for days had been waging a gallant fight against paralysis—a fight full of the spirit and the courage he had displayed on the diamond for 52 years.

Cantillon will be buried at noon Monday in the family plot at Janesville, Wis. Funeral services will be conducted here tomorrow by the Rev. Father Gettlefinger at Sacred Heart Catholic church and on Sunday night the members of the family will leave with the body for Janesville, Wis.

There will be services at the grave and it is expected that the final tribute of his friends in the baseball world will be paid there, as there will hardly be time for many of them to reach here by tomorrow, though scores of them sent telegrams of condolence today.

Cantilloh's passing removed one of the most picturesque figures in the baseball world. Since he started his career as bat boy for the Janesville, Wis., club in 1888, "Pongo Joe" had served as manager, umpire, player and scout in a dozen leagues, had discovered some of the outstanding players of the game.

Rioux Makes No Defense; Tut Whips Bruce Flowers

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Elzear Rioux, Canadian heavyweight, joined the ranks of the world's greatest divers last night, when he made a beautiful swan in the much advertised fight with Primo Carnera of Italy at Chicago Stadium.

The Canadian, who appeared frightened when he entered the ring, took his final dive after the opening round was only 47 seconds old. Previous to this he had gone to the mat five times. On two of the occasions he was not even hit and on another went down from a blow which landed on his shoulder.

The punch which terminated the fight was a glancing overhand right cross. It was not a solid punch, but the Canadian went to the mat and stayed there until Referee Dave Barry had tolled off the ten seconds. During the time he was in the ring, Rioux never laid a glove on the Italian. He didn't even raise his gloves to defend himself.

Carnera Rushes Rioux.

As soon as the bell rang, Carnera rushed out of his corner and smothered Rioux with short right and left hand punches. The Italian missed with several wild swings and it seemed as if the Canadian went down from the breeze created by the blows. Primo did not show the least concern.

It is a certainty that Rioux could have made a better fight. A short time ago he met Heine Mueller of Germany in the same arena. He took a lacing but he at least fought back, something which he did not attempt to do last night. He did not even try to sidestep the rushes of his opponent nor did he try to defend himself by covering up.

Carnera was not in the ring long enough for one to draw an opinion of his ability. He is big, strong, and heavy. He appears light on his feet and punches straight. What he will do against stiff competition remains to be seen. He ought to be ruled out of the ring if he was a party to last night's farce, the worst in Chicago since the sport was legalized. Carnera weighed 269 pounds and Rioux, 205¾.

Tut Defeats Flowers.

The best fight on the card was between King Tut of Minneapolis and Bruce Flowers of New Rochelle, N. Y. Tut was given the decision. He jumped into an early lead which he increased by scoring two knockdowns in the seventh round.

Tut upset his opponent with a stiff right cross. Bruce stayed down for a nine count. A few seconds later he turned loose a long left swing which sent Flowers to the mat again for another count of nine. Bruce got to his feet and managed to weather the round.

Tut tried hard to put his opponent away in the eighth round, but Flowers covered and King was unable to get a shot at his jaw. Flowers regained his strength in the ninth and tenth rounds, which were about even.

Tut weakened himself by trying to stop Flowers in the seventh and eighth. His blows lacked power in the closing stages of the fight, but he had piled up enough points in the earlier rounds to win by a comfortable margin. Tut weighed 137¼ pounds and Flowers 133¾ pounds.

Levinsky Beats Barry.

Ray McIntyre of Los Angeles, Cal., won all the way from Irish Mickey Gill of Dublin, Ireland, in the opening bout. Ray was far too clever and piled up points by use of well directed left leads and right crosses. They met at 119 pounds.

In the second bout King Levinsky, local light heavyweight, was given the six round decision over Jack Barry, also of Chicago. Barry took two counts in the fifth round as a result of right crosses to the jaw. Levinsky made a more creditable performance than in any of his recent appearances.

Al Greenfield of Chicago took the six round decision from Pean Boireau of France in the other bout on the card. Al's clever left hand enabled him to pile up points and keep the Frenchman at a safe distance. Boireau had the advantage at close quarters, but Greenfield was the master at long range. They met at 130 pounds.

E. L. Cook and W. A. Battye were the judges and Tommy Thomas and Dave Barry handled the fights in the ring.

COMMISSION ORDERS BOTH PURSES HELD UP

18,000 Watch Elzear Fall 6 Times.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

Eighteen thousand boxing customers sheepishly wandered out of the Chicago Stadium last night feeling that Primo Carnera and Elzear Rioux had not given nearly as funny a show as had been expected for the money. Everybody knew, of course, that Elzear, the Canadian bear slayer, was destined for a spirited plunk to the canvas sooner or later. But the fans craved some fun with the act.

And what happened? As clownish a series of six tank plunges as you ever saw, winding up with an unimpressive belly buster that wouldn't have afforded a chuckle to a man with a laughing jag. Honest folks, it was terrible.

Elzear Too Intent on Job.

Elzear wallowed around in the tank in a most pitiable exhibition of unskilled reactions. He was so intent on his assignment that he didn't wait for Primo to come through with his part of the performance. However, the greatly advertised Primo got close enough to get all splashed up as his alleged adversary plunged about, apparently for no reason at all.

Two members of the Illinois boxing commission—George Getz and Fred Gardner—were at the ringside and witnessed the incongruous exhibition in which Rioux went down repeatedly without even striking at Carnera and being hit only two blows of any consequence. They immediately ordered the purses of both fighters (if such they may be called) held up pending a formal meeting of the commission next Tuesday.

Paid $500 a Second.

According to Commissioner Gardner, he will ask the suspension of both performers in Illinois with the recommendation that they be barred in the 33 states controlled by the National Boxing association.

The amount of Carnera's purse was not made known, but if he appeared for the same percentage he received from the Madison Square Garden his end would be $28,322.24, or 47½ per cent of $59,625.78, the gate announced last night by the Stadium management.

These figures perhaps are high for a boxing performance, for there is a commission rule against even a champion taking down more than 37½ per cent. It is known, however, that the ruling has been circumvented on occasion, when the attraction was confined to individual popularity.

Carnera had been under contract to fight at the Coliseum next month, but the commissioners predicted that the Italian giant was in for a suspension which at least would carry beyond the current indoor season.

Fans Expected Too Much.

So surprised were some of the ringside bugs, long known as gluttons for punishment in their devotion to the fine sport, that there was a clamor for Jack Dempsey to emerge from retirement and send Carnera back to his carpenter bench in southern France. Some of the excited dupes promised to get out a petition addressed to the Manassa Mauler.

The groveling of Rioux in the rosin was so raw that even Honest Abe Attell, who served as a second for Carnera, was chagrined. Attell ever has been known as an artistic soul and it is to his credit, perhaps, that he turned a pale sea green as he watched Rioux's naïve antics during the 47 seconds he lasted.

Of course, it is doubtful if any one paid his dough expecting to see a fight. But undoubtedly all expected to see an artistic exhibition of Carnera moving his vaunted No. 16 shoes over the canvas for a round or two. And it is certain that the customers had a right to expect the French-Canadian to take at least one good sock before passing out.

The appearance was artistic enough up till the time of the gong, and led many of the 17,349 paying witnesses to expect a charming few minutes.

Primo entered the ring gorgeous in a bright green ensemble which included a cap, a jersey shirt, and shimmery trunks, each of a different shade but forming a beautiful blend. He pranced about the ring midst the plaudits of the witnesses.

Rioux Misses Cue.

He posed for photographers while waiting for the gong, and when the bell rang he loped playfully out to go through his routine. In an apparent spirit of good natured fun he was about to bump into Elzear, but Elzear missed his cue somehow and fell down before any damage had been done. Then started the bouncing process, all of which consumed only 47 seconds.

Primo's wardrobe attendant then climbed into the ring with a partial change of costume for the Italian, which included an elegant blue robe. Sig. Carnera then went around the ropes, reaching through to shake hands with several persons who thought he had scored a manly victory. There were three persons, to be exact, who seemed to think Primo had triumphed in a great big way.

Peoria, Ill., Jan. 31.—George Myer Jr., the Quincy heavyweight who won the Golden Gloves in last year's TRIBUNE tournament and later knocked over his opponent in the intercity match between Chicago and New York, is an ambitious young man.

As a result of his victories in 1929 George is eligible to compete in the impending TRIBUNE struggles for the Golden Gloves. But George likes a fight and as the Peoria Journal-Transcript sectional tournament opened here tonight in the Y. M. C. A. gym he is on hand ready to punch a few big boys into fistic oblivion.

Tom Mead of the University of Illinois and Lloyd Faubel, a seven footer from Washington, Ill., were George's chief rivals in the heavyweight division.

About 60 boys from an original entry list of 80 appeared at weighing in time this afternoon. The semi-finals and championship matches will be staged tomorrow night.

Peoria, Bloomington Rivals.

Rivalry approaching the fighting point was evidenced by the Peoria and Bloomington fans. The same fans chase umpires over the center field fence when their teams meet during the Three Eye league baseball season and Mr. Frank Herold, the local impresario, one of the judges tonight, hesitated for an instant before he cast his decision for Augie Stauff of Peoria after Augie handed Charley Dungee, a Bloomington flyweight, a good lacing.

Mr. Herold and the other judges had nothing to worry about when they submitted their expert opinions on the second scrap. George Dungee, a brother of Charley, and Harold Gaffney, both of Bloomington, were the contestants. Dungee got the decision and he showed plenty of boxing skill.

The first knockout of the tournament came when Johnny Hayes of Peoria started one at his ankle which landed on Bill Coyle's chin in the second round.

8 ADVANCE AT SOUTH BEND

South Bend, Ind., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—The National Guard armory here rocked with laughter tonight when Charles Holmes, 23, a 235 pounder, who reads meters for the water company in the day time, defeated his boyhood chum, Arthur Rothballer, 20, who tips the scales at 225, in the first heavyweight fight of the South Bend News-Times preliminary Golden Gloves boxing tournament. Rothballer is a football player at Central High school. The finals will be held Monday night.

Holmes said after the fight that if he had to go another round he would have been taken home on a stretcher.

Just to prove that the days of fighting journalists are not over, Robert Hoenig, 126 pound News-Times reporter, won the bout with Gladstone Edgehill. Frank Bedist, a bantamweight, whipped Hoe Locksmody.

Fans were surprised to learn that Isadore Gutstein, who was to box Messenger Boy Joe Veney this evening had withdrawn. The boys are about evenly matched. Both weigh 124 pounds.

STREATOR CROWNS CHAMPS

Streator, Ill., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Eight youths tonight were declared champions in their respective weight divisions in the Time Press-CHICAGO TRIBUNE Golden Gloves tournament. They will make up the Streator team in THE TRIBUNE'S Golden Gloves finals in Chicago starting Feb. 25.

In the last and one of the best fights of the night, Edward Stroebel a 195 pounder, gained a technical knockout over George Hammers of El Paso.

Stroebel and Hammers stood toe to toe and slugged for two full rounds, both nearly out on their feet. Hammers was unable to answer the bell for the third round.

The first, second and third place winners in each class:

HAWKS' WIN OVER LEAFS TONIGHT MEANS 2D PLACE

The touring Chicago Black Hawks, who have won two and lost three on their present eastern invasion of the National Hockey league, have one more chance to take back second place from the New York Rangers tonight. The New Yorkers are idle, while the Hawks match shots and body checks with the Toronto Maple Leafs. Other games tonight:

Detroit at Pittsburgh.
N. Y. Americans at Montreal.
Les Canadiens at Ottawa.

Leading Ski Jumpers Meet Tomorrow in Palos Park

Ski fans of the Chicago district will have a chance to see their third and last tournament of the season at Swallow hill in Palos park tomorrow. Director of sports, John F. Berry of the Forest Preserve district announced that the slide is in perfect condition, and many of the country's leading jumpers have entered the tournament.

KANKAKEE, THORNTON SPLIT.

EARLIER CHICAGO.

TO HELPER J. J. C. we are indebted for reminder that George M. Cohan, who opens at the Erlanger tomorrow night for his first Chicago appearance in many, many years, was the first actor to appear in the old Iroquois theater following the great tragedy fire of 1903 in which 575 persons perished.

For some time afterward the theater stood vacant. Many felt that out of sentiment to those lost it never should be reopened. Finally it was refitted and named the Colonial. Theatrical people wondered who would venture the first dubious engagement.

Cohan at that time had just produced and was appearing in one of his greatest hits of all time, "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway." To his dismay, he learned that his Chicago engagement had been billed at the Colonial. It was no use balking, he was under contract. He regretted it the more as he was a great popular favorite, keenly sensitive, withal.

Cohan confided his misgivings to local friends, among whom was the late Tom Barrett, then sheriff and a former amateur baseball player. Barrett ordered all his political appointees and their friends to attend the opening performance. It is said he personally bought several hundred tickets. "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway" was so good and Cohan's popularity so great the engagement was a success and started the Colonial on its renaissance.

Many years ago, as our caravan of buggies jogged along to the moonlight picnic or barn dance, we'd sing "Take Back Your Gold," "Nancy Lee," "Nellie Was a Lady," "White Wings," etc. And on the way home the boys, feeling rather elevated after having lapped up some of the hard cider served, thought it was about time to produce some real he-man singing and burst forth into the devilish ditty of "Solomon Levi," while we girls, wishing to be thought neither too bold nor too prim, joined in the chorus, sotto voce, believing that we, too, were being real devilish in a perfectly ladylike way. This was in the "Elegant Eighties."

Ghosts Walk in Abandoned Newark Park

of a cross-roads journalist in Mississippi attacking the Republicani party. Either that or ignored it, which was worse.

But the customers had nothing to gain or lose in the fight. The federal leaguers were in the business for no glorious motives, but only to partition the major league profits three ways instead of two. They wanted nothing but their price.

Fred's Inspiration Falls.

I seem to be tarrying at this grimy old lot on the outskirts of a factory city with very little remaining to identify it as a storied field in the sport business, but many picturesque events occurred here. Harry Wills knocked out Fred (Smackover) Fulton in less than a round, as I recall it, in a ring pitched over second base one evening after the war, and a man told me that Fred choked up and lost his gumption just before the bell rang when he discovered that a prick in his arm had been made by a stickpin from his second's necktie and not with a hypodermic needle which was supposed to inject some secret and very mysterious fighting medicine which would immunize a man to taps on the chin.

Here, also, one night, I watched Georges Carpentier belabor old Bat Levinsky, the retired light heavyweight champion of the world, who suddenly bethought himself of his title which all the world had forgotten, and left his hearthside near Philadelphia to pass it over.

Tex Rickard, lately returned from his ranching in the Argentine, where the end of the war left him with several hundred thousand beef cattle on the hoof, and no military market, was planning the first of all the million dollar prize fights at the time, and had chosen Carpentier as the party of the second part in a Dempsey production. The International Sporting club of New York, a very refined and pretentious racket in which many of the most refined millionaires about town were suckerized, so to speak, very kindly produced the Carpentier-Levinsky episode at great cost to the charter members and thus built up Carpentier for Mr. Rickard.

This travelogue seems to be detained in Newark among the ruins of a burnt down ballyard.

I had intended to spend a paragraph at that field in New Brunswick where Princeton and Rutgers played the first game of intercollegiate football in this country; another at Asbury Park where the horses ran and the gamblers gambled and wine was used for bath water in years gone by; and so on down the seaboard to Land's end by this time.

Perhaps the tour will be continued in your correspondent's next, if any.

AL ESPINOSA AND SHUTE TIED WITH 68 IN TEXAS OPEN

San Antonio, Tex., Jan. 31.—(AP)—Densmore Shute, young Columbus, O., professional, and Al Espinosa, Chicago, a veteran golf pro, blazed a par-breaking trail over this deceitful municipal course today to lead a field of almost 150 golfers in the opening round of the ninth annual Texas open golf tournament. Each shot the par 71 layout in 68 strokes to gain a leg on the $1,500 first prize.

Shute, who had his first taste of important victory in the recent Los Angeles open, apparently found it pleasant. He posted his 68 early in the day and let the field shoot at it. Late in the afternoon, after scores of crack shots had fallen by the wayside, Espinosa came through to equal the mark. But for two three-putt greens coming in the Chicago star would have led the field at the quarter mark.

A hole in one enlivened the day's festivities. Jack Forrester, New Jersey professional champion, plunked his tee shot in on the 190 yard tenth to round out a 73 score.

Two strokes behind the leaders were two young Elmsford, N. Y., par shooters, Tony Manero and Mike Turnesa, each with a 70. The younger Turnesa brother took a 37 on the outward trip, one over par, but clipped two strokes from perfect figures coming in. Manero was even par out and one under par on the back nine.

LAMPRECHT BEATS JUSTIN

Edgewater Park, Miss., Jan. 31.—(AP)—G. Fred Lamprecht, New Orleans, former national intercollegiate champion, today eliminated Frank Justin, Chicago, one up, in 37 holes in the semi-finals of the Pan-American amateur golf tournament. Lamprecht came back after being six down with eight holes to go.

Jack Westland, Chicago, French amateur champion, eliminated Johnny Lehman, Chicago, 3 and 2, in the other semi-final match and will meet Lamprecht tomorrow in the finals.

N. O. HANDICAP TODAY ATTRACTS FIELD OF 27

New Orleans, La., Jan. 31.—(AP)—With some of the best horses on the turf entered, the $10,000 New Orleans handicap will be run tomorrow at the Fair Grounds racetrack under promised clear skies and fast track conditions.

Although the purse was cut from $50,000 to $10,000, the handicap attracted a field of 27, with interest heightened by the expected duel between L. M. Severson's Paul Bunyan and the Wild Rose Stable's Dowagiac. Paul Bunyan has been showing his heels to the best the New Orleans tracks had to offer this winter and has beaten about every horse running tomorrow except Dowagiac.

REVIEWS FIND TRADE EMERGING FROM SETBACK

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 31.—Although lack of uniformity is still prevalent, the circle of industrial improvement is gradually widening, Dun's Review today points out in its weekly summation of conditions in trade, industry, and business. Bradstreet's Review takes much the same attitude, declaring that January has marked a definite expansion in industry and bettering of the unemployment situation.

"Trade and industry, partaking of the irregularity of the weather in January, are still to be classed as spotty, with industry leading in activity and wholesale and jobbing lines in the last week of the month tending to expand, while retail buying, on the other hand, has seemed to quiet," says Bradstreet's. "Taking the month as a whole, industry has shown definite expansion, and there is no question but what employment has likewise expanded from the low levels of December, while on the other hand operations are not so active, nor is buying so well advanced as a year ago.

Steel Operations Rise.

"Iron and steel mill operations, responding to good buying of railroad cars, steel for agricultural implement makers and for fabricators, and perceptibly heavier takings of automobile sheets and strips, has risen to a full 75 per cent of capacity, some of this perhaps at the expense of prices, which show a downward urge for bars, plates, and shapes.

"A year ago steel trade capacities ranged from 85 to 90 per cent. The automobile manufacturing trade, like iron and steel, is adding to its employés, but is still well below a year ago's flowing tide of operation. Shoe manufacturers have expanded operations, and machine toolmakers, especially of electrically driven lines, all note more doing. Clothing and dress manufacturers in some, not all cities, are active as are makers of bathing suits and some types of hosiery. There is talk of a strike of clothing workers at New York City.

Weather Retards Building.

"The weather in recent weeks has been decidedly against building and building materials, and curtailment is still on in cotton and woolen lines and in jewelry, glass, and tile making. Furniture trade reports are mixed, some manufacturers being active while others are rather slack. The weather has continued to help the coal trade, as a whole but prices are more spotty. Relative quiet continues in most metal mining areas, especially in copper producing sections. Lumbering operations in the Pacific northwest and at the south are gradually winning out of the quiet superinduced by weather as well as building trade conditions, but orders and shipments exceed production."

Dun's review says in part: "Further progress has been made toward emergence from the setback in business, with the circle of improvement gradually widening.

"Conditions at the month end disclosed the expected lack of uniformity and also various unsatisfactory features, yet gains in activity and in sentiment have become more distinct. With recognition of the fact that a broad recovery from a recession of major proportions would not be likely to come otherwise than slowly and unevenly, results in January have been encouraging and in certain respects more favorable than was anticipated.

Reflects Betterment.

"The decisive revival in the great steel industry is not representative of the situation generally, yet is clearly evidenced at betterment in some other manufacturing branches, including automobile production, and is obviously a promising augury. That upturn, which has been more rapid than was commonly looked for, implies a larger engagement of workers in different lines and the trend of employment is being watched closely as an indication of the probable public buying power.

"The status of retail trade, which is naturally governed mainly by the purchasing ability and disposition of consumers, reveals many irregularities, but in numerous cases sizable reductions have been made in dealers' stocks through offerings of attractively priced merchandise.

"The statistical barometers of business still show the adverse influence of the late speculative upheaval, but the higher totals of failures, the smaller railroad freight traffic, the decreased bank clearings, and other similar records reflect phases which should be modified with the extension of the present process of recuperation."

Reports Decided Drop in Week's Business Failures

New York, Jan. 31.—(AP)—A decided drop in the number of business failures in the United States occurred this week, a total of 545 being reported to R. G. Dun & Co., compared with 644 last week, a reduction of practically 100, and with 541 insolvencies for the corresponding week last year. All geographical sections of the country reported fewer failures this week than last week.

Buys Flats and Stores at Hutchinson and Lockwood

Miss Edith Schuster, with A. Clyman & Co., represented both parties in the sale yesterday of the southeast corner of Lockwood avenue and Hutchinson street, by John Szuch to Frank Sieracki for a reported $52,000, subject to $17,000. The building contains eight flats and four stores. The lot is 50x125.

Listed Bonds Firm Despite Big Offerings

New York, Jan. 31.—(AP)—Listed bonds showed encouraging resistance in the face of a large volume of new issues today. Compared with the market's heaviness on occasions of some of the recent financing, the course of trading was generally steady, although closing prices represented an irregular mixture of small gains and losses in bonds of the best grade.

The $80,000,000 in new flotations was mostly of utility description. International Telephone's $50,000,000 loan in 25 year debenture 5s was oversubscribed and the obligations, admitted to dealings on a when issued basis, advanced an eighth above the offering price of 96½. With this sale out of the way, the stock improved and therefore the convertible 4½s were able to move up, closing 2⅝ higher. The outstanding debenture 4½s gained about half a point.

Reverses Form.

Call money showed a sudden reversal of form, renewing at 4 per cent for the first time since Jan. 27, 1928, and then going to 4½ as the month-end demand for funds quickened. Time accommodations were unchanged, ranging from 4½ to 4¾, but bankers' acceptances were cut an eighth. United States government securities showed small price increases.

Foreign bonds continued to reflect buying. This was especially true of government loans. The French and Belgian listings, as well as the Australians, Japanese, and the Italy and German 7s, received support.

Convertibles were affected only slightly by the strength of the stock market. American Telephone 4½s had a net rise of ⅞. Missouri Pacific 5½s moved up ½, but New Haven 6s were stationary, and Atchison 4½s lost ¾. American I. G. Chemical 5½s recovered from their recent depression, finishing at 101⅜.

Rail Prices Mixed.

Rails made a poor showing of resistance, although a few, including Canadian National 5s of 1969, Central of Georgia 5s C, Florida East Coast 4½s, Hudson Manhattan Refunding 5s, Friscos, International Great Northern 6s, Southern Pacific refunding 4s, and Union Pacific 4s of 1968 moved against the tide. Atchison 4s of 1955 were down 1½ points. Soo 4s of 1941 and Northern Pacific terminal 6s reached a new low.

Clearfield Coal 4s appeared for the first time in more than a year, showed a loss of 5 points. Victor Fuel 5s were off 9 points. French government and railway bonds were strong. Australians recovered some of their recent losses. Belgians, Norwegians, Japanese, Peruvians, Brazilians and Colombians were higher. Treasury 4s stood out in the United States government bond trading with a gain of nearly ½ point. Four and one-quarters were steady.

WABASH ASKS SUPREME COURT TO RECONSIDER

Washington, Jan. 31.—(AP)—Counsel for preferred A stockholders of the Wabash railway today asked the Supreme court to reconsider its recent decision affecting their rights in the distribution of dividends.

Emphasizing the importance of the decision because of its bearing on the rights of all owners of non-cumulative preferred stock issued by railroads and other corporations, counsel for the stockholders submitted a series of questions which it was asserted the court should answer to enable industry generally to know the full significance of the word "non-cumulative."

MO. STATE LIFE INSURANCE CO. BOOSTS CAPITAL

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 31.—(AP)—A $1,000,000 increase in capital stock of the Missouri State Life Insurance company was authorized today by its board of directors at the annual meeting. The increase is to be offered present stockholders at par of $10 per share on the ratio of one share of new stock for each four shares of the old stock held, and will increase the company's capital stock to $5,000,000.

Bank Clearings Are 23.6% Lower Than a Year Ago

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 31.—Bank clearings for the current week declined 23.6 per cent, compared with the same period of a year ago, Dun's review reports. Clearings amounted to $9,680,402,000 of which New York had $6,555,000,000. New York's clearings were 26.9 per cent below those of last year, while the aggregate for centers outside New York was 15.6 per cent below last year's. Every large city reported less clearings than a year ago.

N. Y. C. Asks Permission to Acquire Ohio Short Line

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.—(AP)—Carrying out directions of the interstate commerce commission, the New York Central applied to the commission today for permission to acquire the Federal Valley railroad of Ohio, one of several short lines it was ordered to obtain to insure continued operation. By arbitration a price of $150,000 has been placed upon the 20 mile road.

FARM POLICY IS BLAMED FOR COTTON SLUMP

Private Enterprise Held Needful.

BY SCRUTATOR.

A great deal of confusion has been caused by the policy laid down in the federal farm marketing act that speculation should be minimized. In so far as it has been applied to the task of forcing speculators in farm commodities from the open exchanges it is quite likely that harm has been done to price levels.

Cotton is one of the goods that is so affected. Testimony before a senate investigating committee recently showed that dealing in future contracts in New York was off 50 per cent from the previous year and that it was scarcely a fifth of what it was three years ago. This fact, added to the statistical position of the world crop and certain other factors, has tended to reduce the cotton price until it is no more than the loans which are made by coöperatives with government money.

Speculators Absent.

The way this works out may be explained by a consensus gathered from cotton men of wide experience. The 1929 crop, it is known as the trade, was ginned more quickly than any past crop. There was a quick movement to market. The cotton was for sale, but the speculators, the men who are willing to buy when it is offered, were not present. Because the bulk of the crop reached the market in four months of summer and fall, and spinners, the consumers of the raw material, require twelve months to get rid of it, oversupply becomes apparent at once.

The spinner is not a good speculator. It is bad business for him to take a risk for a year. Accordingly, he purchases only what he needs for a short time unless the price goes to an unduly low level.

Thus the farmer, with the speculator driven out, comes face to face with a buyer unwilling to commit himself for more than his immediate needs. It is a buyer's market. The coöperative, if any one does it, must step in and take the risks. It cannot eliminate them; it can only shove them over to the government's finances. It must guess on any prices that are not the ones established for a short period by actual sales.

Farm organizations are beginning to take a quieter view of the "middle man." The establishment of an exchange to deal in hog futures, projected in Chicago, has brought no protests; rather the contrary.

Seek More Legislation.

Yet representatives in congress present bills to make speculation more difficult for individuals. Representative Brand of Georgia has one to make it a felony to engage in contracts or agreements for controlling prices so as to drive them downward. Whether this means prison for any one making a short sale is doubtful, but it is severe enough to frighten more speculators. Mr. Vinson of the same state has another bit of legislation designed to "narrow the area of speculation" in cotton.

As matters stand now, cotton is becoming more of a domestic consumption crop. Once two-thirds was exported, now about half. The rest of the world is expanding cotton acreage much faster than the United States, and set a new record with the present crop, while the domestic one is three million bales short of the one four years ago.

It is a little difficult to see, under the circumstances, what has been gained by forcing the farmer or his cooperative or the government to take over functions that were handled by private enterprise.

Will Feature New Name Slogan—The Dixie Line

The Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railway will "actively feature in advertising and the solicitation of freight and passenger traffic" of the future its newly adopted name slogan, the Dixie line, according to announcement of W. I. Lightfoot, general passenger agent, made to the railroad's general freight and passenger agents.

STUDEBAKER CORP. OMITS ITS USUAL STOCK DIVIDEND

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 31.—Directors of the Studebaker corporation voted today to omit the quarterly stock dividend of 1 per cent on the common stock due at this time, declaring only the regular quarterly cash dividends of $1.25 on the common and $1.75 on the preferred shares.

The common stock of the Burroughs Adding Machine company was placed on a $1 annual dividend basis when directors declared a quarterly payment of 25 cents a share. Previously the stock paid 80 cents annually.

George A. Fuller company declared a regular quarterly dividend of $1.50 and a participating dividend of $1.94 on cumulative participating prior preferred stock, and the regular quarterly dividend of $1.50 and a participating dividend of $1.40 on cumulative participating second preferred stock, all payable April 1 to stock of record March 10.

CLUETT, PEABODY 1929 EARNINGS SHOW DECREASE

New York, Jan. 31.—(AP)—Cluett, Peabody & Co. of Troy, N. Y., had net income of $663,540 last year, equal to $1.71 a common share, compared with $1,359,013, or $5.26 a share, in 1928. Net sales for 1929 totaled $21,468,087, against $21,557,011 for the previous year.

C. R. Palmer, president of the company, commenting on the reduction in net, says it was partly due to "unusually large writeoffs in inventory occasioned by obsolescence and style changes," but that recent changes in merchandising and operating policies should result in material improvement." The company's inventory is now the lowest since 1915. Substantial reductions in factory overhead and selling expense were reported.

Texas Gulf Sulphur company today reported 1929 net income of $16,247,478, which is equivalent to $6.40 a common share. This compares with $14,517,619, or $5.72 a share, in 1928.

Support Proposal to Link Two Railroads

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.—(AP)—Additional support of the proposal of the Great Northern and the Western Pacific railroads to connect their lines by constructing a section between Klamath Falls, Ore., and Keddie, Cal., has been given by the three western state organizations. They were the Arizona Corporation commission, Public Utilities commission of Colorado, and the Public Utilities commission of Idaho, all of which asserted the additional transportation facilities should be permitted.

Curb Issues Rise as Bulls Open Throttle

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 31.—Bulls opened the throttle on the curb exchange today and stocks went soaring to higher levels under leadership of the best issues in every group. Shares were taken in large blocks at constantly rising prices, and at the close gains of from 1 to 5 points had been registered by nearly every active stock and there was a generous sprinkling of larger advances.

The turnover was more than a million for the first time during the current year, some 1,062,000 shares changing hands. Trading was sustained all day, and the ticker beat out the happiest tune to be heard by speculators—"higher prices on larger sales."

Electric Bond and Share, bellwether of many bull movements, was out in front again today and closed with a 5¾ point run on sales of 228,000 shares. Duke Power, up 32½ points, and Huylers preferred, up 30, set the pace among the others.

Report Swedish MatchKing Negotiates with Austria

STOCKHOLM, Jan. 31.—(AP)—The Kreuger & Toll company, whose head is Ivar Kreuger, the Swedish "match king," is reported to be negotiating a loan of 250,000,000 schillings [$35,625,000] to the Australian government. As in the case of the company's recent loan to Germany, Austria presumably would grant a match monopoly in return.

IMPROVEMENT CONTINUED BY CHICAGO PRICES

U. S. Gypsum Shares Gain 3 Points.

Chicago stocks continued to improve yesterday, prices going generally higher on a turnover of 275,300 shares for the day. The automotives, featuring Borg-Warner, which spurted up 2⅞ points, and the Houdaille-Hershey shares were among the leaders of the movement.

One of the widest movements of the day was that of U. S. Gypsum, which finished three points higher at 46. Super Maid gained 2⅜ to stop at 52⅛, while Lion Oil ran up to a short lived 18⅜ gain, only to recede for a net gain of only ¼ of a point at 20⅜. Reports that Super Maid stock dividends would augment the $3 cash payments favored its activity.

Recedes from High.

On limited trading Commonwealth Edison hit a high for the day of 257, only to close at 253 with a net gain of 2½. Middle West Utilities, which experienced heavy trading again, closed fractionally better, as did Cities Service among the utility stocks. National Electric Power A finished with a higher standing at 31⅞.

Cord corporation, operating company, remained unchanged at 13¼, following its first statement since its organization. Net income as of Nov. 30, last, amounted to $230,830, after all charges and federal taxes, equal to ten cents a share on 2,260,000 shares of capital stock outsanding. BY FRED HARVEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 31.—Thanks to easing credit and reports showing a steady improvement in business, speculation for the rise continued to dominate the situation on the stock exchange today.

Traders here seem inclined to ignore entirely the unsettlement that has upset the tenor of things so severely on the country's leading commodity markets in the last few days. In fact conditions in the big share market are growing better every day and have been for something like two weeks now.

Thus today trading hit a brisker pace on the whole and the gains were more substantial and more generously distributed than they have been probably on any other day of the upward movement. The turnover was easily the largest of the year approximating 3,739,420 shares.

Utilities Buoyant.

Nearly every group participated in the upturn. The utility shares were buoyant, the steel group was unusually strong, the department store shares had their first good market this year, and the oils were active for the first time in weeks.

Popular trading favorites like Westinghouse, Johns-Manville, General Motors, Radio, and General Electric were turned over in heavy volume and all emerged with good sized gains. United States Steel rose to a new high for the recovery, winding up with a net gain of nearly 3 points on the day.

Call money renewed at 4 per cent for the first time in nearly two years, and, although it was boosted back to 4½ in the afternoon due to the calling of loans for month end requirements the fact cut little figure in the optimistic calculations of the financial community, as most of the borrowing for the day had been done at the lower figure. Credit conditions, in the opinion of well informed market followers, points strongly to an early reduction of the federal discount rate here, which doubtless would be accompanied or shortly followed by similar action in London.

Pool Operations.

SHEEP—Fed western lambs yesterday, $10.50@12.75
One month ago, 12.50@13.50
One year ago, 16.25@17.00

The hog market yesterday experienced one of the most uncertain and erratic markets of the season, but when trading was over, both the extreme top and general average prices were the same as on Thursday, at from $10.40 and $10.05, respectively. The trend of the market was reversed twice during the day. Prices opened stronger, weakened off in midsession when some sales were as much as 5@10c lower, but finished comparatively firm, in face of an advance estimate of 16,000 for today. The price spread between western and eastern markets has widened and more eastern interests are appearing on the market lately. Outsiders bought 13,000 yesterday. Only 4,000 remained at the close.

Demand Is Limited.

Limited demand met yesterday's 2,500 cattle and prices were barely steady. Quality was lacking, which is usual on Friday, and the best steers available averaged 1,144 lbs, and sold at $14.00. Fancy steers and yearlings have been scarce all week and show gains of 25@50c, but the rank and file of offerings are closing steady to 25c lower than a week ago.

Cows and heifers were slow at the week's 50@75c decline. Calves were unchanged yesterday, but show losses of $2.00@2.50 for the week. Stockers and feeders were scarce, but sold slowly at weaker prices.

Lambs Hold Steady.

Salesmen succeeded in blocking additional price cuts in the lamb market yesterday, and some spots were considered slightly stronger. Better grades sold largely at $12.00@12.50, with the extreme top stopping at $12.75, while a range of $10.50@11.75 took most 95@105 lb averages.

Extreme weights are at the lowest level in seven years. The last time heavy lambs were obtained at $10.50 was in 1923 when they were exported at this figure. Aged sheep and yearlings were unchanged, light ewes selling at $7.00. Country demand for feeding lambs was narrow and prices barely steady.

Receipts at Chicago for today are estimated at 260 cattle, 16,000 hogs, and 5,000 sheep, against 259 cattle, 15,552 hogs, and 3,076 sheep, the previous Saturday and 529 cattle, 8,276 hogs, and 7,323 sheep, a year ago.

Probable receipts of hogs at Chicago for next Monday are estimated from 60,000 to 90,000. I. J. Brenner marked 90,000; W. C. White, 85,000; H. C. Carlson, 80,000; J. M. Waters and R. W. Trotter, 78,000; W. S. Nicholson, C. Southwick, and G. W. Chandler, 75,000; G. Brittain, 73,000; F. Knutzen, 71,000; S. Lund, A. G. Welhener, J. T. Agar, H. Turner, J. T. Brown, and O. Dwight, 70,000; W. T. Reneker, R. B. Ellis, and E. E. Hubbard; 65,000, and H. Pattison, 60,000.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE

Money in Chicago firm at 5½@6½ per cent on collateral, 5½@6½ per cent over the commercial paper, 4½@6½ per cent; bankers' acceptances 3@3½ per cent; Chicago clearings yesterday were $180,000,000; balances with $83,900,000 a week ago and $166,500,000 a year ago. PLANS BUILDING AT CRAWFORD AND MADISON

Walgreen to Erect Four Story Block.

BY AL CHASE.

Architect Arthur Howell Knox is drawing plans for a $300,000 building to be erected by the Walgreen company at the northeast corner of West Madison street and Crawford avenue. The building will have foundations capable of carrying eight stories, but for the present only four stories will be erected. The Walgreen company will occupy the corner store, 30x80, and the balance of the first floor will be rented to other concerns. The upper stories will be used for shops and offices.

The site, which is 79x116, was leased last March by the Walgreen company for 99 years and 10 months from James Nelson and May Wynne. The annual rental is $34,747. At the time the property was acquired it was announced that a building was contemplated. Wreckers will start at once to remove the present old improvements and work on the new building will start on March 1. The exterior of the structure will be of stone.

Buys Twelve Flat Building.

C. A. Teter has purchased the twelve apartment building at the southeast corner of 77th and Morgan streets from Mittelman Bros. for an undisclosed consideration. W. C. D. Trankle and the Triangle Investment company were brokers.

In a trade Dennis M. Mafloy has acquired from Marguerite Hedman and Grace C. Southman the two story Fashion building at 5037-43 Cottage Grove avenue, lot 110x100 feet, subject to $47,500. This building is under three and a half year lease to the University of Chicago for use as a book bindery, etc. Mr. Malloy gave in exchange 50x125 feet of vacant at 7245 Cottage Grove avenue, subject to $5,000. O. H. Hargrove of Selz & Southman represented all parties as broker.

Title to the six flat building at 7060 Greenview avenue, lot 65x74 feet, has been transferred by Arthur F. Nelson to Bernard F. Skeheno. There is an incumbrance of $67,000 on the property.

Lincoln-Sheffield Corner Sold.

Alexander Heckt[illegible] has purchased the irregular sized lot at the northwest corner of Lincoln and Sheffield avenues, improved with six stores and one flat, from Alexander Roth. The ground is 99½x82x101¾ feet. Mr. Heckt[illegible] exchange the store improvements at 3021-33 North Cicero avenue. Mordecai Shulman represented Mr. Heckt[illegible].

C. W. Atkins has sold his residence at 725 MacLean avenue, Kenilworth, to James L. Decker, through Hugh McDonald of H. O. Stone & Co.

Bessie Raskin has sold the two story brick residence at 2654 Wilson avenue to Edward B. Weinstein for a reported $20,000. Edelson & Paullin were attorneys.

WHEAT PRICES REBOUND AFTER SELLING LOWER

Short Covering Absorbs Surplus in Pit.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Liquidation was on again yesterday for the sixth straight day in wheat, with all deliveries dropping rapidly to a new low on the crop. March touching $1.13⅞ and May $1.18⅛, the latter being within ¼c of the bid for No. 2 hard winter put out for country run cash grain by the coöperatives in the local market.

Prices were off 11@11¾c from the high of the previous week and 23¼@ 49¼c from the best figures of the season. There was a marked change in sentiment during the day, with some of the leading commission houses and local professionals feeling that there had been decline enough for the time being.

Heavy short covering absorbed the surplus in the pit on the break, and a bulge of around 2¼c from the inside figures followed, with the finish at net gains of ⅛@⅜c. March being $1.15⅜@1.15⅝ and May $1.20½@ 1.20¾. Winnipeg again showed more strength than Chicago and closed 1¼ @1¾c higher. Kansas City, however, was ¼c lower. Liverpool broke badly on liquidation and declined 3¼@3½d, while Buenos Aires was ½c higher and Rosario, unchanged to ⅜c lower.

Liverpool Wheat Low.

The bad break in the Liverpool wheat market was regarded as making it the lowest in the world relative to prices prevailing in exporting countries. Chicago March at the time Liverpool closed was only 2¾c under that market, while Buenos Aires was 7¾c under. Chicago going to a discount under Argentine for the first time.

Heavy buying of wheat futures at Winnipeg credited to the pool was mainly responsible for an upturn of 4½c in that market from the low point of the day, and reports indicated 800,000 bu Manitobas had been sold for export, although the seaboard failed to indicate any business of consequence.

Uncertainty as to the attitude of the farm board to the drastic decline in values, which put Kansas City May as much as 3¾c under the basis for No. 1 hard winter in that market had some effect on sentiment, although there was selling early on a report that Minneapolis mills would protest to the board regarding coöperatives paying $1.25 for No. 1 northern in that market for country run grain and ask that the price be reduced. Millers took 56,000 bu cash wheat from Chicago handlers, with No. 2 hard winter from store offered at March price f. o. b. cars.

Corn Closes on Rally.

There was no material pressure on the corn market, although the July sold at a new low on the crop. An Omaha house was a free buyer of May, and with short covering prices advanced around 1c from the inside figures and closed about the top with net gains of ¼@⅝c. March being 87¼c, May 90¾c, and July 92¾@92¾c. 92⅞c.

Oats held within a range of 1c, with little pressure on the market, and the close was at the top, with prices unchanged to ⅛c higher, March leading. The latter finished at 43¾@43⅝c, and May at 45¼c. Shorts and commission houses bought toward the last.

There was little evidence of liquidation of concentrated holdings of rye during the day, the bulk of the selling being by scattered longs and locals. Action of wheat had considerable influence, and the close was ⅛@ ⅛c higher after all deliveries had sold at a new low on the crop. March finished at 84¼c and May at 84⅜c.

B. & O. Seeks Permit to Issue Bonds and Stock

Washington D. C., Jan. 31.—(AP)—Authorization to issue $63,031,000 of thirty year 4½ per cent convertible gold bonds and $52,525,800 of common stock for iconversion purposes was sought today by the Baltimore and Ohio railroad in an application to the interstate commerce commission.

RAILROAD NOTES

Special one-way coach excursion rates for travelers to California, Nevada, and Utah will be offered on the overland route during March, according to C. A. Cairns, passenger traffic manager of the Chicago and North Western railway. The special rate saving will amount to more than one-third of the regular rate.

The competitive campaign for safety honors conducted yearly by the Pennsylvania railroad will be enlarged during 1930. Heretofore five trophies have been awarded to the regions making the best safety records, but the regional departmental trophies are to be discontinued. The awards will be based on the lowest number of casualties to employés on duty per million man hours.

A petition asking that a receiver be named for the Jacksonville and Southeastern railroad was filed in the federal court at Springfield, Ill., yesterday by the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, a creditor. Granting the petition, the court named Elmer Nafziger of Springfield as receiver and set his bond at $12,500.

The Pittsburgh and West Virginia railroad was authorized by the interstate commerce commission to issue and sell $6,000,000 of thirty year first mortgage 5 per cent gold bonds. The proceeds will be used to finance further construction of its Connellsville extension. The issue also will be used to refund $2,000,000 of short term notes recently issued.

Seaboard Air Line is said to have asked for revised bids on 2,000 cars.

Missouri Pacific will buy 20 caboose cars.
